I know this is a make-or-break time for our candidates and for those of us who are in these campaigns to have great representation. There is lots of good work going on. Knox has voted over 100,000 people during early voting. We have probably raised the Dem base in every campaign, but it takes over 50% to win. So there is close to another 100.000 votes still expected before we are done.

We have been pulling out all the stops. Many of you have done more than one thing to help and all that you are doing is appreciated. Districts 9 and 6 have been human billboarding and enjoying time together and the positive responses we are getting from the public. We still have Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday to get people to the polls.

The Tennessee House Dem Caucus Chair contacted me the other day to let me know that Bryan is very close, so anything we could do in that race would be appreciated. Earlier in te week, we learned that the Caucus had done polling and Lindsey had shown more votes against Zachary than before and there was a possibility to pull that raise through. See the recent email from her campaign manager on the numbers from early voting. Jenny tells me her numbers shown a big % increase in Dem votes in early voting. Gloria and Sam had no opposition, so we should be polling more purple than we have for over 35 years. Good luck and thank you to all our candidates, family, and campaign staff.

AGENDA ITEMS:

Appoint a nominating committee. We need a minimum of three members to serve on the Nominating Committee. And they are going to need you to agree to be an officer: President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer.

Historically, the early vote here runs R+31.89.
This year, our most conservative model puts it at R+4.46.

That's a 27-point shift toward Democrats. Nobody handed us that. Y'all built it.

I built our campaign's forecast model, and I ran the numbers through 1,000 election simulations. What's spooky for Republicans, is that Lindsay wins 51.66% of those simulated elections. Her average projected vote share is 50.07%.

So, here's where we are. This race is a tossup, with Lindsay slightly favored. I don't say that lightly.

Will you chip in $14 for District 14 to help us reach every voter who could decide this race before polls close on Tuesday?

Will you join us by pitching in what you can today?
