

The Wrong Brothers

A comic walkabout street theatre act

Two hapless aviators, two flying contraptions, and absolutely no chance of take off.

The Wrong Brothers

Is it a bird? Is it a plane? No, it's definitely not a plane!

As the age of aviation dawns, The Wrong Brothers are busy testing their not so successful contraptions of flight. Bear witness as Orville and Wilbur Wrong attempt to make aviation history. Be prepared to be dazzled by their breathtaking aerial stunts, left in awe by their pioneering machines of flight, and overcome with admiration for their gloriously groomed moustaches.

The chicken. The ostrich. The penguin. For millennia, man has watched on in envy as the birds rule the ever elusive skies. But not for much longer. Expect flight demonstrations, formation flying and aeronautical wisdom dispensed to anyone within earshot, as The Wrong Brothers leave those down on the ground in bemused astonishment. Just how high will they fly? 10, 20, maybe even 30 centimetres. The sky really is the limit.

About the act

The Wrong Brothers is a comic walkabout act inspired by the early pioneers of flight, and an affectionate tribute to the inventors whose machines never quite got off the ground. The act features slapstick routines and engaging interaction with audiences. Two different flying contraptions give visual variety across the course of an event.

"An absolute pleasure to work with. From beginning to end they were full of energy, and we all loved the aviation themed characters. Exactly the addition our event needed."
