FEATURED PANELIST

Raquel Mazon Jeffers, MPH, MIA

Deputy Commissioner for Population Health, New Jersey Department of Health

Raquel Mazon Jeffers brings more than 30 years of experience advancing public health initiatives and building equitable, community-centered healthcare systems. As Deputy Commissioner for Population Health at the New Jersey Department of Health, she leads efforts to improve health outcomes and address the social, environmental, and behavioral factors contributing to disparities across the state.

Her career includes leadership in public health modernization, mental health, and addiction services. Previously, she served as Co-Director of the Community Health Acceleration Partnership and held senior leadership responsibilities within the New Jersey Department of Human Services. She holds graduate degrees in Public Health and International Affairs from Columbia University.