Grenada

A woman in a bikini and snorkel gear is swimming in clear, turquoise water. She is wearing a yellow snorkel and has her arms outstretched. The water is very clear, and the sunlight creates a shimmering effect on the surface.

Known as the Spice Isle, Grenada brings a distinctly aromatic character to the Caribbean, with nutmeg, cinnamon, cloves, ginger and turmeric woven into everything from local dishes to rum punches. Food is a way of life here, with flavours rooted in its fertile volcanic soil and surrounding waters.

At the heart of Grenadian cuisine is oil down, the island's national dish – a comforting one-pot stew of salted meat or fish, coconut milk, turmeric, breadfruit, dumplings and vegetables. Seafood is equally central, with fresh mahi-mahi, tuna, lobster and snapper appearing alongside fragrant rice, plantain and local produce. Seek out roadside grills, fish shacks and market stalls for an authentic taste of island life.

Grenada's culinary story extends beyond the plate. Visit a cocoa estate to discover the island's cacao and see how beans are transformed into handcrafted chocolate, or explore Belmont Estate, where traditional farming and food production remain part of everyday life.

And then there is rum. Distilleries such as River Antoine produce traditional pot still rum, while bars across the island make the most of local spirits, fresh fruit and plenty of spice. From market-to-table experiences to elegant restaurants overlooking the Caribbean, Grenada offers an authentic culinary journey – one where the island's warmth, produce and heritage are tasted in every bite.
