

SAFETY DECALS — Incumbent Worker Training

Safety Decals, a forward-thinking manufacturer based in Ludington, recently partnered with Michigan Works! West Central to invest in the growth and development of its team. As a result of this collaboration, seven employees successfully completed Incumbent Worker Training and earned their Operator Certifications—enhancing both their skills and confidence on the production floor.

Understanding the value of communitybased solutions, Safety Decals made a strategic decision to utilize a local training provider known for designing hands-on training models.

This commitment to local resources not only supported the regional economy, but also ensured training was customized to meet the specific operational needs of their facility.

The Operator Certification program focused on critical areas such as machine operation, workplace safety and process efficiency. Employees gained practical knowledge that immediately translated to improved performance, reduced downtime and more consistent production outcomes.

Beyond the measurable improvements in workflow and productivity, the training has had a significant impact on morale. Employees feel empowered by their new skills and proud of the company's investment in their development.

Safety Decals' success story is a testament to the power of local partnerships and workforce development. By working with Michigan Works! West Central and choosing a trusted Ludington-based training provider, the company has taken meaningful steps to strengthen its team and ensure continued growth in an increasingly competitive industry.
