Environmental Policy

Allen Built recognises the need to undertake all business activities in a way that maximises exceptional environmental management. As such, the company complies with all Tasmanian and Australian Environmental laws, regulations and guidelines. This includes (but is not limited to)

- The Environmental Management and Pollution Control Act (1994) TAS.
- All requirements set by the Tasmanian Environmental Protection Authority (EPA).
- All requirements set by local councils and state and federal governments.

To achieve the company's goal of minimal environmental impacts, the following check points are consistently implemented:

- The reduction of unnecessary waste of building materials by ensuring accuracy of ordering and careful use of such materials while onsite.
- Using resources economically while achieving the project's success according to the requirements of the NCC (e.g. electricity, water, building products, etc).
- Identify and troubleshoot against potential accidents that could impact the environment adversely.
- Where possible, use products that have a negligible environmental impact, where appropriate options are available.
- Promote a culture within the workforce of environmental stewardship (e.g., toolbox discussions).
- Ensure waste is minimised onsite and is disposed of correctly.
- Being mindful of waterways and weather conditions to minimise waste wash-off from jobsites.
- Take on feedback from all stakeholders regarding environmental conscientiousness.
- Drive safely according to all laws to ensure impacts on wildlife and the environment are minimised by such activities.
