

BYLAW CERTIFICATION

Liability & Risk Exposure

The Challenge For Municipalities

The nature of frontline bylaw enforcement work and dealing with the public brings with it a certain amount of inherent risk for Employees and Employers. Most often, with outcomes dictated by the absence of professional training standards and practices.

The lack of qualified training and adherence to professional standards presents a significant risk. Most often, Employees end up having to learn on-the-job due to no consistent training programs available. Further, the absence of in-person training opportunities creates additional challenges with the inability of Employees to engage and participate in hands-on education and instruction.

Safety Awareness

The Solution: Centralized Training

The Bylaw Enforcement Officer Certification program is the first education and training program of its kind. Participants attend a comprehensive, three-week in-class, training program taught by professional instructors throughout Ontario.

Standardized, thorough and established based on public and private law enforcement best practices. Successful participants graduate with their Bylaw Enforcement Officer Certification, as well as several other accredited certifications, including Use of Force, Baton certification, Standard First Aid/CPR and AED, as well as CRISIS Communication & De-escalation and Mental Health First Aid (MHFA).

Ultimately, providing Employees with the highest level of education and training that successfully prepares them for in-service orientation and onboarding.

Professional Training

Train With The Best

Established Training Standards

Similar to Basic Training at the Provincial police colleges, the Bylaw Enforcement Officer Certification program offers standardized education and training that municipalities can count on. Structured training modules, comprehensive educational materials and professional Instructors provide consistent adherence to only the highest standards of training excellence and industry best practices. Providing Employers with the assurance that their Employees are properly trained, prepared and are job ready.

Standardized Education and Training

Employee Safety

Certified Instructors

Qualified

All Instructors have extensive law enforcement and frontline CRISIS intervention and de-escalation experience. As well as, professional instruction certification. Through one-on-one, hands-on training, participants gain firsthand knowledge and learn practical skills from experienced Instructors with court recognized expertise.

Professional Training

The CANSEC Advantage

The real benefit of the Bylaw Enforcement Officer Certification program is that courses are scheduled annually at set intervals. Predictable scheduling not only saves Employers valuable time and money, but it gives them a strategic advantage in planning and budgeting, screening and hiring new staff.

Ultimately, increasing operational efficiencies. Best of all, successful participants receive all of their initial training in one location and are automatically scheduled for annual re-qualification. With full academic tracking and reminder service included.
