

Patients have the right to receive a “Good Faith Estimate” explaining how much their medical care will cost.

Under the law, health care providers should give patients who don't have insurance or who are not using insurance an estimate of the bill for medical services.

- You have the right to receive a Good Faith Estimate for the total expected cost of any non-emergency services. This includes other costs like medical tests, prescription drugs, equipment, and fees.
- Make sure your health care provider gives you a Good Faith Estimate in writing at least one business day before your medical visit. You can also ask your health care provider for a Good Faith Estimate before you schedule an office visit.
- If you receive a bill that is at least $400 more than your Good Faith Estimate, you can dispute the bill.
- Make sure to save a copy of your Good Faith Estimate.
