FACTS ABOUT CRABGRASS

Crabgrass is a warm-weather grass whose growth is triggered by warmer temperatures, typically in late June. It is highly unlikely that you would ever see Crabgrass any earlier than June. Crabgrass seeds can lie dormant for up to 10 years. Even a lawn that has had consistent control for many years can experience an influx of Crabgrass from these dormant seeds when certain weather conditions persist to trigger germination. Dried out, cracked soil next to concrete also triggers germination of dormant seeds.

PREVENTING CRABGRASS FOR 4 & 5 TREATMENT CUSTOMERS

If you are a 4 or 5 treatment customer and experience an outbreak of Crabgrass on your property, the cost of retreating those areas would be based on the property size. Below are the best cultural practices needed to support Crabgrass Control post-application:

PROPER MOWING HEIGHT

Taller grass blades will shade the soil & prevent germination of Crabgrass.

FEED REGULARLY

A thick, full lawn seldom contains much crabgrass. A 6 or 7 treatment plan provides the recommended amount of nutrition required to create a thick full lawn.

DEEP WATER YOUR LAWN

Water lawn deeply and infrequently to promote deeper roots. The lawn will grow thicker and crowd out Crabgrass.

REPAIR LAWN DAMAGE

Fill in and repair any bare spots in the lawn, which are prime areas for Crabgrass to grow.

IS IT REALLY CRABGRASS?

Tall Fescue, or Quack Grass, is a type of field grass that is often confused with Crabgrass. Crabgrass grows close to the ground and spreads outward while Tall Fescue grows in upright mounds. Tall Fescue is a cosmetic issue that will not respond to our products and must be dug out by hand.
