

STUDENTS CONFUSED TO FIND MIRRORS MISSING

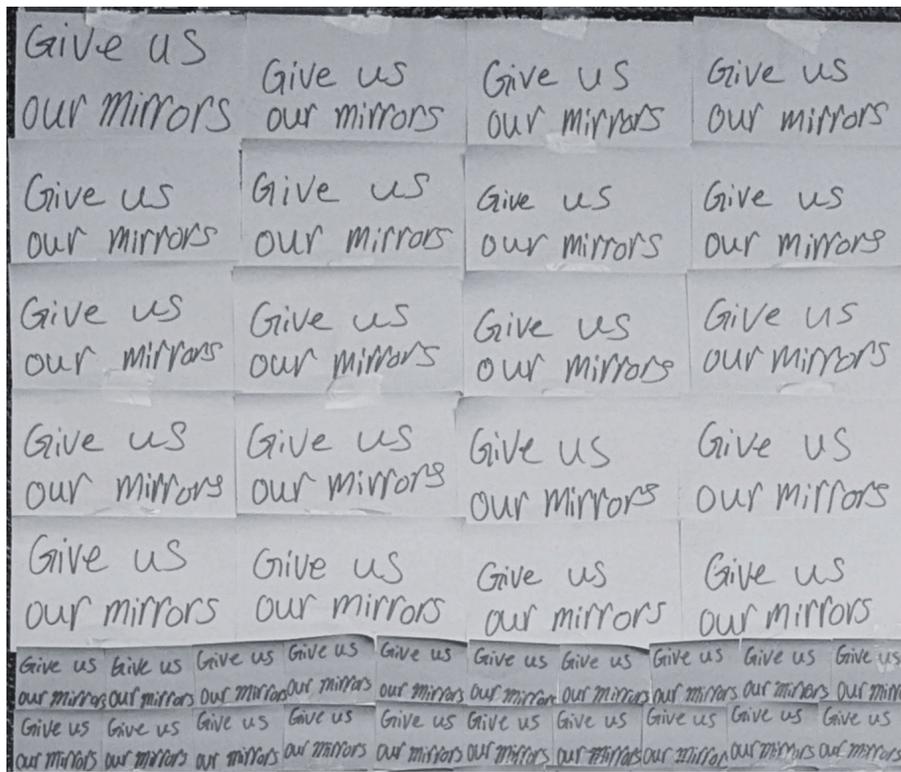

BATHROOM MIRRORS

MISSING?

At the start of September, the staff took the mirrors away in retaliation of students skipping class.

STUDENT RESPONSE TO THE MIRROR SITUATION:

Most of the student body knows why the mirrors were taken away, and although there have been fewer reports of students hanging out in the bathroom, they have been mostly upset by the mirrors being taken away.

STICKY NOTE REBELLION

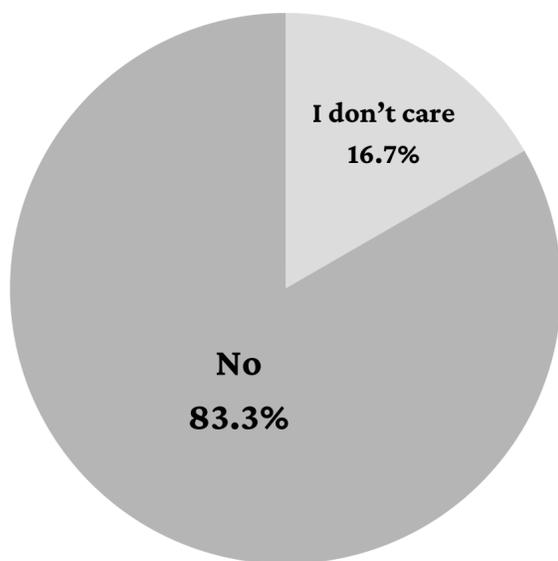

According to our survey, 83% of students felt that the response to the situation was inappropriate.

Some alternative suggestions have been:

- Have someone monitor students coming in/out
- Punish the skippers
- Talk to the students about the situation

The situation has caused many students to be frustrated that they have to suffer the consequences of someone else's actions.

DO YOU THINK THE FACULTY TAKING AWAY THE MIRRORS WAS AN APPROPRIATE RESPONSE TO THE SITUATION?

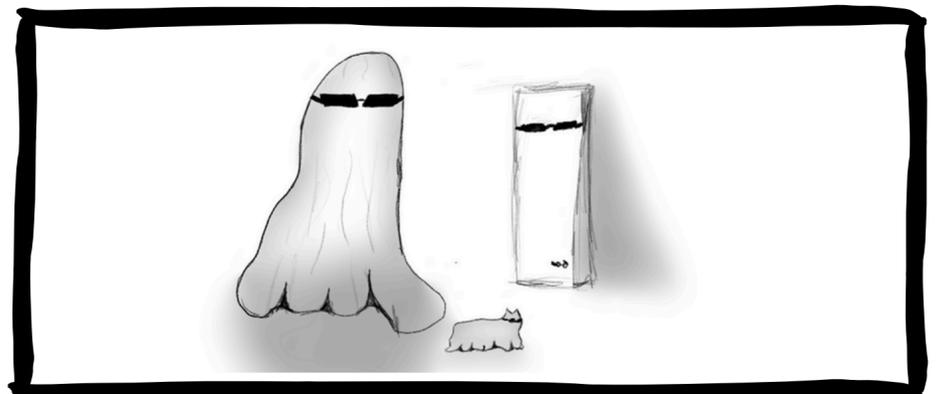

Response	Percentage
Yes	0%
No	83.3%
I don't care	16.7%

“Hope” is the thing with feathers -
That perches in the soul -
And sings the tune without the words -
And never stops - at all -

And the sweetest - in the Gale - is heard -
And sore must be the storm -
That could abash the little Bird
That kept so many warm -

I've heard it in the chillest land -
And on the strangest Sea -
Yet - never - in Extremity,
It asked a crumb - of me.

POETRY

A story of Hurley, Troy, Gooden and Sam.

By Nicolas Galloway

There once was a girly named Hurley.
Hurley's hair was curly and her build was quite burly.
In class she would doodle all sorts of swirly whirlies.

There once was a boy named Troy.
People often described him as coy.
But under his bashful exterior, all he felt was joy!

There once was a man named Sam
For lunch all he had to eat was ham.
This is because he's poor.
Capitalism, man.

There once was a woman named Gooden.
She had a doll that was wooden.
She spent all day and night, that Gooden,
Twiddling this doll, that was wooden.
So that she may give it to a girly, a girly named Hurley.
Hurley then engraved swirly whirlies on the dolly wolly,
So that she could give it to the coy boy Troy,
To hopefully make his day a little more gay!

As in happy!

Sam is just poor.

SHORT STORY

My claws tapped against the bar as I took a sip of milk from the shot glass. "So, you heard about the breadsticks over at FoFo's recently?" My partner, Tony, asked from beside me. "No, Tony." I hissed back. I knew he was just stalling so I couldn't ask about the obvious jewels stuffed in his little kitty pockets. "Just thought you'd like to know, Tommy." Tony said, wiping the milk from his whiskers with the back of his paw. Tony could tell I was getting fed up. "What's in your pockets, Tone?" I raised my little kitty eyebrow at him. "Nothin'!" Tony defensively replied, his tail suspiciously swishing. I pointed at the clear shape of jewels crammed in his little kitty pockets. "Don't look like no anchovies to me, pal!" I argued. Tony sighed, "Listen, Tommy, I know we said our robbin' days were over, but-" I interrupted Tony, "But what?! Tony, we have a family together! We agreed no more stealin'! We're not alley cats no more." Tony looked down guilty as Tommy scolded him. "I know we did, babe. I'm sorry." Tony tried to apologize, but it was already too late, the deed had already been done. Tony and I were over.
