About the Role

As a Disability Support Worker, you'll be at the heart of supporting participants to live more independently and achieve their personal goals. You'll provide practical assistance with daily living, community access and social participation while promoting dignity, choice and inclusion.

Key Responsibilities:

- Deliver high-quality, person-centred support to NDIS participants
- Assist with daily living tasks, personal care and household duties
- Support clients in community engagement, recreational activities and appointments
- Encourage and empower participants to build life skills and independence
- Follow individual support plans and document progress accurately
- Maintain compliance with NDIS standards and organisational policies
- Communicate effectively with participants, families and team members

About You:

- Experience in disability, aged care or community services (preferred but not essential)
- A genuine passion for helping others and a commitment to inclusion
- Excellent communication and interpersonal skills
- Ability to work independently and as part of a team
- Cert III or IV in Individual Support, Community Services or a related field (desirable)
- Current Driver's Licence, NDIS Worker Screening Check and Working with Children Check

If you're ready to make a meaningful impact and grow your career in disability support, we'd love to hear from you.
