OUR APPROACH

Mineplex offers a practical and contextualised one-day workshop specifically designed for frontline supervisors to provide them with the knowledge, know-how and confidence to fulfill their obligations.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

In this workshop, participants will engage in an in-depth exploration of the following topics:

- The history of Queensland mining legislation, highlighting significant events such as the Brady Report and the Grosvenor Board of Inquiry. This will provide essential context for understanding the current mining safety and health legislative framework.
- The fundamentals of legislation, with a focus on how the site's Safety and Health Management System (SHMS) aligns with the legislation.
- Identify key supervisor responsibilities and learn how to fulfil them by taking "reasonable precautions" and exercising "proper diligence".
- Review where frontline supervisors fit into the SSEs management structure to effectively manage mine's "Material Unwanted Events".
- Implement and oversee effective strategies for risk management, incident management, and communication & consultation.
- Review past incidents to avoid repeating them in the future from the viewpoint of the supervisor.

This workshop aims to deliver a meaningful learning experience by examining past incidents to prevent future occurrences, all from the perspective of a frontline supervisor.
