"Reasons People Give"

I have been helping churches and nonprofits raise the financial resources they need to support their missions for almost 40 years. And in that time, I have learned there are three primary reasons people give:

- 1). belief in the mission of the institution
- 2). a high regard for staff leadership (and)
- 3). the fiscal responsibility of the institution.

I will comment on each briefly.

A Belief in the Mission

People want to make the world a better place to live. They want to believe that they can truly make a difference for the better. There is embedded in us, it seems, a desire to finish out our work on this earth with a sense that we amounted to something. To sum it up, people want to be a part of something that changes lives.

This is what churches and nonprofits offer to do. At their best, they help to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, heal the sick, give hope to the hopeless, bring peace to the troubled, and in general make the world a better place.

For example, a couple of years ago I went to my local Costco to renew my membership and the person assisting me recognized me as one of the pastors at the House of Hope Presbyterian Church. With tears in his eyes, he said: "Your church saved my life. I have been attending AA meetings there for seven years and I have been sober for the past five years. Thank you for the ministry of your church. Your support of AA has changed the lives of countless people in our community."

Needless to say, I was not expecting to hear such a story on a visit to Costco, but it is the kind of story that I have heard from people in all of the churches I have had the privilege to serve—and I have heard them here, too!

Regard for Staff Leadership

People seem to intuitively know that the church building or program is not what is changing lives; it is the people leading that church and those programs that make the difference. When they have confidence in those people to perform, gifts follow. When they see pastors, staff, and congregational leaders who have great vision and show excellence in leadership, people will invest in that vision and trust in the skills of those leaders to make the hopes of the donors come true.

As an Interim Pastor, I am at an inherent disadvantage because I have only been here a short time and many people do not yet know me well, so there is no track record for you to go on. However, when I look back on the recent history of FPCN it is clear that the congregation has enjoyed strong leadership from its pastors, staff, and governing boards and that they have been worthy of your trust. They have great vision. It is my job to provide the same kind of leadership for the short time I am here so that this same tradition can be handed to your next installed Senior Pastor. In fact, we all have that responsibility.

Fiscal Stability of the Institution

When people invest in churches and non-profits, they do not want to waste their investment. More than ever donors are holding the church accountable for wise use of funds already given. In one church I served the finance chairperson was worried that we were running a surplus and he did not want the congregation to know that things were going so well because some people might stop giving! Really? The theory is in some churches that if we say we are going broke, people will give us more than if we are telling them we are changing lives. In fact, the exact opposite is true. For instance, it is well known that the Salvation Army continues to get more donations each year than any other social service agency or group. Harvard University is also consistently near the top of universities in endowment-giving year after year. Do they send out the message that they are dying on the vine and must have more contributions to stay afloat? No, they say, "We took your money last year and we did great things with it. If you give us more, we will do more great things." And people give and give to them. People want results and these institutions give positive results.

Churches need to do the same thing. Why? Because we, too, are doing great things, but we are often not very good at telling people about it. That is why personal stories are so important. They convey real life experiences about positive changes in people's lives as a direct result of the work of the church.

Pro tip: Recruit someone from the church to find fifty-two personal stories for use each week of the year in either worship or in the newsletter, you will never have to convince anyone again that the church changes lives for the better and fundraising will become much easier!

Blessings,
Scott Kenefake
Interim Pastor

The Grace of Giving

"Now as you excel in everything - in faith, in speech, in knowledge, in utmost eagerness, and in our love for you - so we want you to excel in this generous undertaking."
2 Corinthians 8:7

Our 2026 Generosity Campaign is underway, and our goal is for 280 households to pledge this year. Your pledge amount comes from your heart, so pledge accordingly. Pledge cards may be found in the pews, church office and online at www.fpcnaples.org/give. If you have any questions, please contact Debbie Savage, Executive Director.

Commitment Sunday
November 16

Welcome back to our Snowbirds!

We have officially rolled into the 4th quarter of 2025! Thank you for your pledges, contributions, and continued financial support of this wonderful church!

Our 2025 paid contributions with gifts through September are at 83% of pledged totals. Contribution Statements through September 2025 have been mailed and should anyone have questions while reviewing them, please contact Joan Congine.

YTD expenses are favorable to budget by $170k, and although revenue is under budget YTD by ($242k), it is favorable to 2024 by $170k. There is a YTD shortfall of ($77k). We hope to close that gap as people return to escape the cold weather.

As always, please reach out to Debbie Savage, Executive Director or Joan Congine, Finance Administrator, if you have any questions.

Pastor Nominating Committee

First Presbyterian Church of Naples

Update from the Pastor Nominating Committee (PNC)

The Pastor Nominating Committee (PNC) is meeting weekly, on Wednesday afternoons.

To date, we have spent time learning more about each other, been trained by the Presbytery, and collected and studied background materials on First Presbyterian Church of Naples. We are particularly grateful for the work that went into the 2025 Mission Study -- this work has enabled the PNC to begin our work in a very efficient manner.

We have begun the extremely important task of developing a Ministry Discernment Profile (MDP). The MDP helps prospective pastors understand the specific vision, mission, and needs of the congregation. It allows them to determine if their gifts and experience align with the church's needs.

As a guiding Bible passage to anchor our work we selected Proverbs 3:5-6:

“Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not rely on your own insight. In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make straight your paths.”

In the days and months ahead, we invite you to help us by praying for the work we are doing and how the Lord is leading us on this journey.

Stephen Ministry

- David Witman

Over the years, we have discussed in this column many topics relating to the work of Stephen Ministry and our efforts to help those in God's community of faith who need our help.

Perhaps it is even more important that God has not only created us to help others but also to need and accept help from God, sometimes through the works of our brothers and sisters in Christ. Many of His people find JOY in helping others but difficulty in accepting help to deal with our own weaknesses and vulnerability.

Daily Meditation, October 6, 2025

DO NOT RESIST WEAKNESS

Henri Nouwen addresses this issue head on with clarity and simplicity: Our weakness and old age call people to surround us and support us. By not resisting weakness and by gratefully receiving another's care we call forth community and provide our caregivers an opportunity to give their own gifts of compassion, care, love, and service. As we are given into their hands, others are blessed and enriched by caring for us. Our weakness bears fruit in their lives.

"Blessed are those who have regard for the weak; the Lord delivers them in times of trouble." Psalm 41: 1

Eric Demeter, a Christian author and contributor to the Boundless.org blog/podcast website, wrote an insightful related article entitled Freedom from Shame, Strength in Vulnerability. If you would like to read the entire article, it can be found on Boundless.org of November 11, 2024.

Some key excerpts from Mr. Demeter's article:

Created by God

Our human nature is to resist vulnerability. We'd rather hide our weaknesses or pretend they're not there. Yet God calls us as Christians to relate to Him with our weaknesses fully acknowledged. As we admit our limitations as humans, we can trust that where our capabilities end, His begin. God designed us with weaknesses so we can rightfully depend on Him. Our built-in weaknesses become the very things that allow God to be God in our lives.

Practically Speaking

Because we are coworkers with Christ (1 Corinthians 3:9), it comes as no surprise that He asks us to partner with Him to overcome our weaknesses. To do this, we must share what we so desperately want to hide — to become vulnerable — the very thing shame screams at us not to do. Risk creates the opportunity for faith. I know my faith in Christ will never mitigate the possibility of others rejecting me, but my place as His child will never be shaken.

Fear often surrounds our deepest vulnerabilities. The reason Scripture states numerous times to "fear God" is because we inherently worship our greatest fear — we are loyal to it. In other words, regardless of what we fear the most, it becomes the hub in which we build our lives around. God, on the other hand, designed our vulnerability for His glory and for us to receive more of His grace through it. This is exactly why God tells Paul, "My power is made perfect in weakness" (2 Corinthians 12:9). Vulnerability becomes not a detriment, but the ultimate empowerment for us to allow God to reign in and through us.

In His wisdom, God created us to be inadequate beings who are complete only when we completely depend on Him. Then we find our freedom from shame and our strength in vulnerability through knowing all of our inabilities are solved by His abilities.

Whew – this school year is already flying by! We whizzed through October with children learning about make-believe and dressing up, nocturnal animals, leaves, apples, pumpkins, and so much more.

Now we are in November, which is a beautiful reminder to slow down and reflect on all of God's blessings in our lives. This month, we are filled with gratitude for the laughter, curiosity, and kindness that fill our classrooms each day. The children remind us daily to see the world with wonder and to give thanks for even the smallest gifts.

Throughout the month, our classes will explore themes of thankfulness, family, and community through stories, songs, art, and play. We'll talk about what it means to have a thankful heart and how we can show God's love through friendship and helping others. Our outdoor explorations will continue as children notice the changes in nature and marvel at the beauty of God's creation.

We're also looking forward to our special Thanksgiving Feast, where our 3-year old and VPK families will share food and fellowship as we celebrate the joy of being part of a caring preschool community.

Mrs. Casagrande's VPK class recently celebrated "Pirates and Princesses Day" to reinforce learning about the letter P. They went on a treasure hunt throughout the school, ending in the office where they found a treasure box with fun gifts for each child!

Ms. Madi's toddler class with a fall sensory experience, painting pumpkins! Children are expressing their creativity and strengthening fine motor skills.

Mrs. Kennedy's VPK class, among others, investigated and experimented with apples by tasting a variety of different types of apples, making juice, and the longest apple peels we've ever seen, using a special apple peeling tool. STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math) at work!

Joan Congine

Finance Administrator

One of the most important staff positions here at FPCN is performed by a woman most of you never see. She comes in at 8 a.m., and very rarely leaves her desk or computer, her eyes on the numbers, staying long after the rest of us leave at the end of the day. Her name is Joan Congine, and she is our Finance Administrator, entering her fifth month with us.

Joan was born in Chicago, and at the age of two she and her mother moved to Jacksonville Beach, Florida. When she was thirteen, they moved back to Illinois, reuniting with family members and discovering the wonderful, supportive love of a "fantastic" grandfather. It was he who was her guiding light as she journeyed into the future. She and her younger sister were raised by their mother, who showed by example the power of working hard and supporting a family. Her mother had a close friend, who had a son named Jeff and little did they know as friends in school that they would be lifelong partners. Following high school, Joan attended Carthage College in Kanosha, Wisconsin, graduating with a major in accounting and a minor in Spanish. She served several companies in her long career of accounting, during which she married Jeff, with whom she has a wonderful son Jeffrey Jr., a stepdaughter Jennifer, and grandchildren Sophia and Joey.

Through recent years, many family members have moved to Florida, and in August of 2024 Jeff and Joan became permanent residents.

Joan has a balance to her many hours of working with numbers. She lights up with stories of their life on three acres in Golden Gate Estates. Gardens and vegetation give way to the rest of her "heart" family: two dogs, one cat, eight chickens, one (feisty) rooster, one Amazon parrot (whom she had for over 40 years) three soon to be ducks, and beehives. It isn't work for her. Watching growth, be it a newly hatched chick or a budding branch, is what makes her heart soar.

When asked Joan why she chose to be here with us, she said, "when I came to interview, I felt comfortable. But when I realized that the money being distributed by FPCN through missions makes such a difference in the lives of so many in our extended community, I knew this is where I wanted to give my time." Joan "loves being here" she said. "This job feeds my soul."

Don't be shy about visiting Joan in our church office upstairs, she loves to laugh and looks forward to meeting everyone.
