

Letter of recommendation

When I met Leandro Areco during his trial period a good four and a half years ago, it quickly became clear that we had discovered a young talent. From the very beginning, Leandro's thirst for knowledge and motivation were evident, and I was convinced that he would be the right apprentice for our company.

My intuition was confirmed when Leandro started his apprenticeship. From day one, Leandro has shown not only motivation and commitment, but also a high level of dedication. Leandro gets the best out of every job and consistently delivers a high-quality end product.

Through his pursuit of development and improvement, Leandro has been able to build up a broad range of expertise in various areas. His skills in creative implementation and marketing aspects exceed my expectations of an apprentice; his work is therefore a great asset to our team.

One characteristic I would particularly like to highlight here is Leandro's strong customer focus. In our agency's day-to-day work, our apprentices have direct contact with customers from day one. This means that answering the phone and attending meetings with clients are part of their daily routine. In this context, Leandro's courteous manner has been praised numerous times by both colleagues and customers.

Over the past few years, I have come to know Leandro as a structured, thoughtful and responsible apprentice. He has been able to flourish in a variety of tasks and has developed enormously, both professionally and personally. Today, he tackles assignments with a high degree of personal responsibility and independence so that I can entrust him with challenging projects without hesitation.

In my opinion, Leandro's development shows that he is ready to consciously take the next step in his career. I am convinced that he will benefit greatly from an international internship and, at the same time, can bring great added value to any team thanks to what he has learned so far.
