BENEFITS OF PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

- Promoting economic development and improving quality of life - Public transit improves access to jobs, social opportunities within the region and community organizations. Public Transit is often considered an amenity by both, individuals and companies looking to relocate.
- Savings - on both gas and car maintenance. If you have a car that is used just for work, you can save 20% of maintenance fees and extend the life of your car, while saving hundred of dollars in gas.
- Lower Emissions - a lot of people talk about helping the environment, this is a way that people can actually do something constructive. By leaving their car at home just one day a week they can lower their emissions by almost 2,000 pounds per year.
- Reduce the dependence on foreign oil - if everyone rode the bus one day a week, the country's dependency on foreign oil would a substantial reduction.
- Use the time constructively - Rather than being stressed, stuck behind the wheel, people can use the time reading a book, listening to their i-pod, (maybe learning a foreign language), planning their day, or conversing with other commuters that are also leaving their cars at home.
