Life. Love. Legacy.™

October arrives with its own quiet invitation to slow down and notice what matters. The air turns crisp, leaves begin their colorful descent, and familiar sweaters find their way back into our daily routines. It's a season of change—but also one of remembrance, gratitude and renewed appreciation for the people around us.

At the heart of our work is a simple but meaningful mission: "To serve the Greatest Generation with honor, respect, faith and integrity." Living out that mission means seeing more than a room number, a care plan, or a daily schedule. We see the mother who once kissed scraped knees, the carpenter whose hands built homes, the teacher who encouraged generations of children, and the friend who never failed to show up when someone needed them. We take the time to know each person—their story, preferences, faith, humor, wisdom and the experiences that shaped them into who they are today. Each life holds hard-earned perspective, deeply held values, wisdom gathered through a lifetime of experience, and memories worthy of being known, shared, and honored.

There is something powerful about being known. We seem to recognize familiar voices somewhere deep within us, connecting the sound almost instantly with memories, emotions, and a sense of identity. That may help explain why hearing someone say our name with warmth—or recognizing the voice of a person we trust—can make us feel more at ease. A familiar voice can bring comfort before the words themselves have even registered. Long before a conversation unfolds, something within us is already saying, "I know this person, and this person knows me." It's a small reminder that familiarity is more than recognition; it is one of the ways we experience connection, reassurance and belonging.

That sense of familiarity is built through small moments, repeated with genuine care: remembering how someone takes their coffee, knowing which song makes them smile, asking about the work they once loved, or taking time to hear a favorite story again—even when we've been fortunate enough to hear it before. It grows through shared laughter, a gentle greeting in the hallway, and noticing when someone seems a little quieter than usual. These details may appear ordinary, but together they create something meaningful. They tell a person: You are seen. You are known. You matter here. And perhaps just as importantly, they remind all of us that the time we spend getting to know one another is never wasted.

Thank you for allowing us to continue serving you and those you love. We're grateful for the trust you place in our communities and for the many ways you help make them feel like home. Please drop in and join us whenever you can for anything scheduled during October. Your presence is always welcome, and it means more than you may know.

Sincerely,

Logan Manning

A MOMENT THAT CHANGED EVERYTHING

It was about 1956 when I, an eight-year-old boy on our South Georgia farm, knelt beside my hand-me-down 20-inch bicycle, trying to put the chain back on the sprocket from which it so frequently slipped. Right there beside the single gate that separated our small house from my dad's parents' house, I was in the midst of a tragedy.

While we lived next door and visited often, I don't remember my grandparents being overly loving toward me and my two brothers. They never attended our ball games or went to church with us. We did roam around their larger house, which had extra rooms—a dining room, a formal living room, and even two bathrooms. One of the hard tasks given to us was waiting for the little bird to pop out of the cuckoo clock. And, of course, I knew where the cookie drawer was. But on this particular day of tragedy, Granddaddy stopped to help put my chain back on. While the task was impossible for me, it was easy for him. In that brief moment, time stood still. I remember. I can still feel the sensation that came over my whole body, a tingling that overwhelmed me. He stopped, he knelt, and he helped—ME.

For a little boy who wasn't accustomed to being doted on, that was huge. We were discouraged from crying or wearing our feelings on our sleeves. You know, rub a little dirt on it and keep going. I never let him know what that day meant to me. As a boy, that was normal; as a grown man, it feels inexcusable.

Almost 20 years later, on the last night of a showing of the Billy Graham film A Time to Run in a Columbus, Georgia, theater, Jesus knelt next to me as I confronted my sin and brokenness. Repentance, confession, forgiveness—He freely gave me restoration and the beginning of a new life as a servant.

I hope you and I can both glean something from this 70-year-old encounter. Whether it is with a family member or a stranger, whether planned or out of the blue, when an opportunity presents itself, don't shrug it off as meaningless. Capture it, hold it close, and then let God lead. He really does want to.

CELEBRATING SEPTEMBER BIRTHDAYS TAKES THE CAKE!

Madison & Joyce York: Together Through It All.

Legacy Village of Cleveland residents

Madison and Joyce York have spent 66 years building a life rooted in faith, family and a deep love for one another. Their story has taken them from childhoods in Bradley County to adventures across the country and around the world, yet some of their greatest joys have always been found close to home, surrounded by the people they love.

Both Madison and Joyce were born and raised in Bradley County in Cleveland, Tennessee. Joyce grew up with one younger brother, whom she often watched and cared for after school and during the summers while their parents worked. Both of her parents worked in plants on assembly lines.

Faith entered Joyce's life in a meaningful way when she was still a child. Around age nine, Joyce was saved at school. Her experience eventually led her father to be saved as well, and he later felt called into ministry and became a Baptist preacher.

Joyce remembers her father as loving but very strict. She shared an especially close relationship with her mother, a woman who was always beautifully put together. No matter where she was going, Joyce's mother dressed up, and her outfit always matched her husband's tie.

Madison also remembers being raised by great parents. His father worked at Cleveland Milling Company and later owned a gas station. His mother founded York Florist, a business that would eventually become an important part of Joyce's life and career.

Growing up, Madison especially enjoyed fishing. He had one younger sister who was 13 years younger than he was, and she sometimes tagged along on his early dates with Joyce. His faith was also established at a young age. When Waterville Baptist Church was planted, Madison became a charter member at just 13 years old.

Joyce, meanwhile, was a gifted athlete who loved sports. She played basketball in high school for a coach who would later become the winningest girls' basketball coach in the nation, and Joyce was a member of one of his earliest teams. She earned a starting position during her sophomore and junior years.

She was particularly good at shooting from one special spot on the court. Three-point shots did not exist at the time, but by today's rules, that is exactly what those baskets would have been. Girls' basketball was played on only half of the court then, making the game quite different from the one played today. Joyce believes she inherited her athletic ability from her parents, who were both athletic themselves.

Basketball was only one of her sports. Joyce was also an accomplished softball player and continued pitching until she was in her 50s. In those days, local businesses sponsored company teams that competed against one another, and everyone wanted Joyce to pitch for their team. Her talent was later recognized when she was inducted into the Bradley County Athletic Hall of Fame for softball.

The church Madison had helped establish as a young teenager was also where he met Joyce. Madison was a few years older, and Joyce remembers him flirting with her and winking at her from across the room, sometimes even while he was sitting next to another girl. He was always giving her the eye, though Joyce bashfully pretended not to notice.

Some time passed before Madison finally asked her on a date. Joyce's answer was unusual but honest: "Call me back in a week." She had been going on dates with someone else and needed time to break things off before agreeing to go out with Madison.

Madison's reason for pursuing her was simple. "She was just a sweetheart," he said.

They did not date long before deciding they wanted to spend their lives together. Joyce graduated from high school in May, then married Madison the following month in June at age 19. A year and a half later, they welcomed their first child, a son named Jeff. Their daughter, Annette, arrived three and a half years after that, born on Madison and Joyce's fifth wedding anniversary.

Madison began working for Bowater in Cleveland immediately after high school and remained there for 38 years before retiring in 1995. He started in labor and steadily worked his way up through the company. Bowater produced newsprint from wood fiber at the time, and Madison eventually became assistant superintendent of the sulfate department.

Shortly after Annette was born, Joyce began working alongside her mother-in-law at York Florist. She initially helped with the administrative work and paperwork before learning to work directly with flowers. What began as office support grew into a successful career as a florist.

Joyce designed and created floral arrangements for weddings and receptions, but her work did not stop with the flowers. She also directed weddings, serving as a day-of coordinator for ceremonies and rehearsal dinners. Weddings were her favorite part of the job. Valentine's Day and Mother's Day were a different story. Those were the most stressful times of the year for a florist, and after spending so much time surrounded by flowers, Joyce never wanted Madison to bring her flowers for Valentine's Day. Instead, he gave her heart-shaped boxes of chocolates. She kept many of those boxes for years.

As their children grew, Madison and Joyce formed close relationships with each of them. Joyce and Annette shared many of the same interests, especially shopping. Madison passed his love of fishing and hunting on to Jeff. Often, mother and daughter would head out to shop while father and son went fishing or hunting.

Madison and Joyce also gave their children a love for travel. Annette remembers family road trips beginning when she and Jeff were in elementary school. About every other summer, the family would pile in and set off together.

One especially memorable journey lasted three weeks. They traveled from Tennessee to New York, then headed west across Canada. From there, they came down the West Coast through Washington, Oregon and California before crossing the country again to return home to Tennessee. Annette still remembers the beautiful places they saw along the way, including Yosemite and the redwood forests.

Madison took Jeff on major hunting trips to Colorado, where they hunted elk. These trips often lasted one or two weeks. They rode horses high into the mountains, slept in tents and experienced the rugged outdoors together.

One of those trips nearly ended in tragedy. Jeff was bucked from a horse, then kicked in the leg by the animal, breaking it. The other members of the group had to ride down the mountain to get help, leaving Madison to care for his injured son overnight. Madison kept Jeff warm and continually cleared snow from the tent so their location would remain visible to the rescuers returning for them. His steady care helped save his son's life.

The Yorks' travels eventually stretched far beyond the continental United States. Madison and Joyce visited Hawaii, New Zealand, Australia, Egypt and Israel. In Hawaii, they even tried surfing. Over the years, they made it to 48 of the 50 states.

Beginning in 2000, Alaska became one of their most memorable destinations. Madison and Joyce drove there in a motor home, traveling far into Canada and then back down toward Alaska. The strenuous drive took about 10 days, with the couple spending roughly 10 hours on the road each day.

Once they arrived, they stayed in Alaska in the motor home for about a month before making the long drive home. Madison salmon fished, and they caught their daily limit. Joyce's job was to can most of the salmon they brought in. They made the drive to Alaska seven times over the years and returned by airplane a couple more times.

Joyce has always loved the beach, and Annette remembers the family going about once a year while she was growing up. They also enjoyed day trips to Parksville Lake and camping weekends at Harrison Bay, where they stayed in a pop-up camper.

Joyce had not grown up in an outdoorsy family, but marrying Madison introduced her to camping and helped her learn to enjoy it. Annette remembers a story from a camping trip Madison and Joyce took before their children were born. While tent camping, they came across a snake. Madison killed it, but Joyce was not about to take his word for it. She made him hang the snake from a tree so she could see it and be certain it was truly dead.

The couple's different personalities have always complemented one another. Joyce is a social butterfly, while Madison is quieter and known for his wisdom. He is a man of few words, but when he speaks, people listen. Joyce is more likely to do the talking, yet Annette describes her mother as wise as well and a wonderful counselor. During Annette's high school and college years, her friends loved spending time with Joyce and asking for her advice.

Faith remained central to the York family. Madison served as a deacon, and Joyce taught a Sunday school class for youth girls. With her outgoing personality, Joyce often took charge of arranging church socials and get-togethers. The Yorks have been faithful members of First Baptist Church since 1995.

Madison and Joyce's children still live in Cleveland and visit their parents often at Legacy Village. Jeff, now retired, worked as a claims adjuster for Allstate Insurance. Annette taught for 12 years, primarily at Bradley High School, where she taught English and yearbook journalism.

WELCOME DINING SERVICES DIRECTOR Chef Adam Lawson

There's a new face in the Legacy Village of Cleveland kitchen, though he may already be familiar to those from the Bradley and McMinn County area. We're happy to welcome Adam Lawson as our new Dining Services Director!

Adam brings nearly 20 years of restaurant management experience to Legacy, along with a culinary degree from Johnson & Wales University. After many years in the restaurant business, he was ready for a change. He wanted to use his culinary skills in a place where food means more than what's on the plate—where a good meal can brighten someone's day and bring people together.

That desire led Adam to senior living and, even better, to Legacy.

When he's not in the kitchen, Adam enjoys spending time outdoors with his wife, Brittany, and their two sons, ages 14 and 17. Camping, hiking, and kayaking are family favorites.

And here's something our barbecue fans will be glad to hear: Adam specializes in smoked meats. Ribs, brisket, and pork shoulder are some of his favorites to prepare. We're already hoping for a taste!

Please say hello when you see Adam around the community. We're so glad he's here and excited for everyone to get to know him.

NIGHT AT THE MUSEUM FAMILY NIGHT

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH "GO. LOVE. SERVE." DAY

The family has continued to grow. Annette has two children and Jeff has three, giving Madison and Joyce five grandchildren. They also have two great-grandchildren.

After Jeff and Annette moved out and Madison and Joyce became empty nesters, their bond only deepened. Annette watched her parents grow closer and closer. They supported one another's interests and pursuits, took excellent care of each other and genuinely enjoyed spending time together.

That devotion carried them through difficult seasons as well, including Joyce's battle with breast cancer. Her treatment and recovery lasted about a year and a half, and she beat the disease with Madison beside her.

For Madison and Joyce, breaking up was simply never something they considered. Joyce's advice for a lasting marriage is not to go to bed angry. Their family and church community helped them celebrate the milestones along the way, including large reception parties at the church for both their 25th and 50th wedding anniversaries.

After 66 years of marriage and counting, Joyce remains grateful for the way Madison cares for her. Annette said her mother has always spoken about how thankful she is that the Lord brought the two of them together.

"He was the only one for me!" Joyce said.

Their marriage has given their children a powerful example of lasting love. Annette feels fortunate to have Madison and Joyce as her parents and remembers always feeling loved while growing up. She saw a couple who supported each other, cared for one another and built their family around a shared faith.

Madison and Joyce are deeply proud of Jeff and Annette. More than professional success or accomplishments, Joyce's greatest hope has always centered on the family's closeness and faith.

"All I ever wanted was for my kids, grandkids, the whole family to just be really close together and to love the Lord," she said.

Today, one of Madison and Joyce's favorite features of their apartment at Legacy Village is their photo gallery wall. It holds pictures of the people who mean the most to them, including both sets of parents, their children, their grandchildren and other loved ones. They enjoy looking at the photographs and remembering the family and experiences that have filled their lives.

Photographs have long been important to the Yorks. After every trip, Joyce carefully organized their pictures into albums, adding the places and dates so the memories would not be forgotten. Those albums now tell the story of a family that traveled across Canada, camped beside lakes, explored distant countries, fished in Alaska and made it home with plenty of stories to share.

Yet the most meaningful story is the one Madison and Joyce have written together. It is a story of a wink across a church room, a request to "call me back in a week," 66 years of marriage and a family held close through every season.

"Gosh, I've had the best life!" Joyce said. "I don't know what I would do without them."

What do you look forward to most about the fall season?
It's been so hot for so long; I like that the weather is getting cooler! It's also nice to see the leaves change color.

What kind of things did you do during fall?
My friends and I used to cut hay this time of year!

Would you rather have pumpkin or pecan pie?
Pecan pie for sure!
