Life. Love. Legacy.™

That's why National Assisted Living Week holds such special meaning for us each September. Each year, the week begins on Grandparents Day and this year carries the theme "Shining through the Years"—a celebration of the many decades of memories, music, and experiences that our residents bring to our community. When someone who spent a lifetime caring for others joins us here, they find themselves surrounded by new friends, compassionate team members, and a sense of belonging that can quickly brighten even the quietest days.

As we mark National Assisted Living Week, we honor all those who have helped shape families and communities for generations. We thank you—residents, families, and team—for sharing your lives and legacies with us, and for allowing us to be part of your journey.

Thank you for allowing us to continue serving you and your loved ones. May God bless you with peace, joy, and the reminder that every stage of life is worthy of love, attention, and connection.

JUST BE REAL

While reading his words about such things as giving, praying, and fasting, a word came to my mind: real. Just be real! I instantly remembered a book I used to read to my babies as they were growing up. I even found a stuffed toy to match the storybook,

'It doesn't happen all at once,' said the Skin Horse. 'You become. It takes a long time. That's why it doesn't happen often to people who break easily, or have sharp

So today, let your guard down and just be real, because Jesus has loved you for a very long time.

Threads of Joy, Stitches of Strength The Quiet Artistry of Marilyn Brewer

When Marilyn Brewer talks about her childhood in Schenectady, New York, she doesn't just mention growing up as the second of four sisters. She paints a picture of a busy household—her mother always at home and a wonderful cook, while her father spent long days working in accounting. She remembers the hum of her sewing machine and the satisfaction of turning babysitting money into armfuls of bright fabric.

Her first real job was at General Electric, a place so sprawling Marilyn still remembers it as "its own city." She was working in the advertising department when she enrolled in a psychology night class. That's where she met Richard Brewer—a young engineer also employed at GE, just like her. Richard was gifted with a great sense of humor. He was more than just clever and quick with a joke; outside the office, he was an accomplished rifle shooter, traveling to competitions in different cities and sometimes returning with a trophy in hand. His father was a shoe repairman, his mother stayed home with the children, and Richard, like Marilyn, carried a quiet pride in where he came from.

It wasn't long before Marilyn invited Richard to Sunday dinner. He was a bachelor living far from home, and she suspected he'd appreciate a real, home-cooked meal—but the truth is, they both felt a pull toward each other from the start. There was something easy and genuine in the way they talked and laughed together, a sense that they'd found something rare. When Marilyn set an extra place at the table, she wasn't just offering him a meal; she was following a hunch that their story was just beginning.

They married in Schenectady, New York, and soon welcomed their first two children. When GE opened a new facility in Roanoke, Virginia, Richard accepted the transfer, and the young family packed up for a new adventure. Three more children followed in Virginia, making five in all: Sandy, Ellen, Linda, Ricky, and Michael. Their home was always in motion—five kids meant endless bustle, nightly noise, and, if you asked the neighbors, a lot of laughter.

Every so often, Marilyn and Richard would load up the car—kids, blankets, snacks, and whatever else five children might need—and head north for the long drive back to New York. Richard relished those trips. He had a way of beaming with pride as he introduced his children to friends and family, eager to show them off. The car was always overflowing, so Richard did what any resourceful engineer might: he built a wooden box trailer to hitch behind them, just big enough to hold all the baby things that wouldn't fit. He was a talented woodworker and truly enjoyed creating things with his hands. Those road trips became their own kind of legend—part journey, part family reunion, with memories wedged in among the suitcases and playpens.

It was during these years that Marilyn's creativity became a thread running through daily life. She made clothes for her daughters, always a new Easter dress and Halloween costumes for all five children. Marilyn got a new sewing machine in 1949 and gave it a workout for many years.

Marilyn's sisters' lives branched out as well—one remained in Schenectady and became so respected in her work for the city's housing authority that the mayor spoke at her funeral, while the other two moved to Florida. Marilyn never lost touch with them, and the bond between the four sisters remained strong.

Work set the pace in Marilyn's life. When Richard accepted a job in Tennessee, they packed up and started over. Marilyn took on secretarial and accounting duties at Lay Warehouse, then spent the next twenty years as secretary for an electrical contractor. Her office was a trailer that moved from site to site, rotating every few months between her employer's largest clients: M&M Mars, Bowater, and Olin Chemical.

Her children grew up and found their own paths. Sandy became a speech pathologist; Ellen earned two degrees, taught chemistry, then transitioned to working in a hospital lab. Linda began her career working in surgery at a hospital in Knoxville, and later moved into quality improvement, where she developed programs that have since been adopted by hospitals across the country. Michael, her youngest, studied electrical engineering at the University of Tennessee, rooming with an Indonesian friend whose family would later become part of Marilyn's own story.

For their 25th wedding anniversary, Marilyn and Richard dreamed big—Alaska for him, Hawaii for her, and, thanks to Michael's friendship, a ten-day adventure in Indonesia. Marilyn shares that in Indonesia, they were treated "like a king and queen," welcomed into homes, and fed dishes they'd never tasted before. In Alaska, they stayed with Marilyn's cousin and dined nightly on fresh halibut caught by a family friend. They soaked up the sun for a few days in Hawaii and ended their journey wandering among the towering redwoods of San Francisco. But for Marilyn, the best part has been remaining friends with their Indonesian family to this very day.

Life brought heartbreak as well as adventure. Richard fought cancer for seven years before passing away in 1995, after forty-four years of marriage. Two of their children are gone and two more now live in long-term care. Through every loss, Marilyn leaned on the friendships she'd built—lifelong bonds that helped her through the hardest nights and made the good days brighter. "Life would be a lot more boring and difficult without friends," she says, and her gratitude for those relationships is unwavering.

At Legacy Village, Marilyn's warmth is unmistakable. Shopping isn't just a pastime for Marilyn—it's a mission, and her friends joke she could outlast anyone at Dillard's. Nancy, her dear friend and fellow resident, remembers a recent trip to Chattanooga: "Marilyn went all over shopping—I had to get a chair and wait for her!" Marilyn loves to eat out and never passes up a good lunch with friends.

"She's very put together, from the inside out," Nancy says, and it couldn't be more true. Marilyn is independent, intelligent, and keeps up with the news—always curious about what's happening in Cleveland and the wider world. She attends church every Sunday, never misses a chance to connect, and greets each day with a positive attitude. Making friends comes easily to her, and Nancy added, "She inspires all of us who are fortunate enough to know her."

She lights up when she talks about her four grandchildren and her new great-granddaughter, sharing photos and stories with unmistakable pride. Despite all she's endured, Marilyn meets each day with steady grace and quiet strength, never losing her appreciation for the people and traditions that give life its meaning. Spend even a short while with her, and you walk away feeling lighter—reminded that joy, resilience, and friendship matter more than anything else.

What did you love most about the back-to-school season growing up?

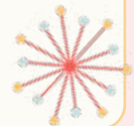

I loved going back to school shopping! Getting new school clothes and all of the supplies that I needed. Then I would get together with my friends, and we would all talk about what we got and what we were most excited about for the new school year.

What was your favorite subject in school?

I liked reading in English class, but history was really my favorite. It just taught me what was going on in the world from the beginning up through the years, and I found it fascinating! I used to read and read about all kinds of history. I still enjoy it.

What types of after-school activities were you involved in?

Oh, we did everything! I was especially involved in sports. I played basketball, tennis and softball. It was a lot of fun.

MEMORIAL

One Saturday morning, the pastor noticed little Johnny was staring up at the large plaque that hung in the foyer of the church. It was covered with names, and small American flags were mounted on either side of it. The seven-year-old had been staring at the plaque for some time, so the pastor walked up, stood by the boy, and said quietly, “Good morning, Johnny.”

“Good morning, Pastor Ron,” replied the young man, still focused on the plaque.

“Pastor, what is this?” Johnny asked.

“Well, son, it’s a memorial to all the young men and women who died in the service.”

Soberly, they stood together, staring at the large plaque. Little Johnny’s voice was barely audible when he asked, “Which one, the Wednesday night or Sunday morning service?”
