Measles Outbreak

Currently, there have been cases of the measles confirmed in 17 states. Six children in Florida have been infected, with 10 total cases in the state of Florida. As Florida is our neighboring state, it is important to be aware of this outbreak and do what we can to prevent the spread of the disease.

The measles is highly contagious; however, most cases in children and adolescents involve non-vaccinated or under-vaccinated children. The primary defense against measles is the measles, mumps, and rubella (MMR) vaccine, which is typically administered starting at 12 months of age.

Parents of young children who are not yet eligible for vaccination are encouraged to explore alternative protective measures. Click the link below to access valuable resources and learn how to effectively safeguard your child from measles exposure.
