

Welcome Dr. Ashley Williams

We are so excited to welcome a new face to the PAMPA family. Dr. Ashley Williams is currently practicing out of the Marietta location, with plans to eventually practice out of our Marietta and Woodstock offices. Dr. Williams believes in caring for the whole patient and family, including supporting the emotional and physical wellbeing of her patients. She wants to take the time to get to know her patients and establish a team that is ready to make sustainable changes and reach wellness goals. She has a special interest in mental health, adolescent medicine, and newborn care. She enjoys spending time with family and friends, fitness, mindfulness practices, international travel, thrift shopping, and trying new restaurants. Dr. Williams can't wait to meet you at your next visit.

Drug Shortages & Controlled Substances

Many of our patients have been affected by recent drug shortages. Parents have always been able to request a transfer of non-controlled substances to another pharmacy without intervention from the doctor who prescribed the medication. However, controlled substances, such as ADHD medications, have been a different story, leading to much back and forth between parents, pharmacists, and providers.

Now, the DEA is loosening its rules in light of recent shortages. Click the button below to learn more about the DEA's recent ruling, and as always, check with your pharmacy to ensure how to best handle a pharmacy-to-pharmacy transfer of your prescription.
