

Wymara Resort & Villas, Most Romantic Caribbean Resort

By James Wong - 02/24/2022

Picture this: rolling out of a Frette cloud, making sandal prints on white-sand beaches, then anointing in luminous turquoise water; all multiplied by two. When it comes to romance, Turks and Caicos Islands know exactly how to service bodies with love. The destination is nature's jewel, a hideaway with rare ease (TCI is well connected to major airport hubs like Miami, New York and London) where hymns of paradise are generously sung. And specifically, paradise lies on Grace Bay Beach, s away, the villas. The former boasts bright bougainvillea-covered grounds, a whitewashed structure, and the latter a gate down to the ocean. They hold one of the most private villas in the Caribbean. Even at full capacity, Wymara elicits privacy. “We’ve been social-distancing way before it was even a thing,” explains General Manager, Jorge Collazo, of the property’s design and natural surroundings. Whilst villas currently allow for group occupancy, he reveals that plans to launch all-new one-bedroom villas are well underway. As close as the forthcoming summer, in fact. “Our new one-bedroom villas will be the ultimate couple’s getaway. One that’s cocooned in limestone, with the most incredible sunset views over the bay area, and of course, their own private plunge pools”.

giving sharing couples more headspace than the bathroom allows for washing rituals; it has a rain shower, double sink tops, walk-in wardrobe, as well as delicious Aesop, pamper products. Only the tub's been permitted to wander for comfort.

As for the social spaces, expect beach apartment chic, lit through floor-to-ceiling glass. It's a versatile area no matter what the couple deems a romantic day or evening in. Perhaps room service is a love song to their ears and so, the team can efficiently layout room service selections in the dining area. Or maybe cooking a meal is the way to the heart, if so, then a full kitchen awaits with state-of-the-art Liebherr, Gaggenau + Bosch appliances. The balcony even has an outside dining set and day beds which are ideal for breakfast or mimosas. "We can Rosé The Stay for any of our guests, whereby a bottle of rosé is on hand throughout your time with us. Whether that's upon arrival, at the cabanas or on the beach," reveals Jorge. "We're happy to tailor our services to individual tastes too, so perhaps you'd like to switch rose out for bubbles or add flowers to the mix...the Wymara team can make any such adjustments."

products. "These products are not only luxury ethos (see below).

With sea views to infinity, it comes as no surprise that many an on-site activity flows around water. The property envelopes a stunning 7,000 square-foot mosaic-tiled infinity-edge pool with island pods and chaise lounges, and a few steps to beach, cabanas point to turquoise waters. Guests dare resist a morning of meditation, an afternoon of ocean-breezed sun basking, or stroll along Grace Bay come dusk. The water here provides for cleansing, for rejuvenation, for a peaceful state of mind. Likewise, on the other end of the spectrum, water at Wymara serves as energy and recreation. Guests looking to exert may take advantage of complimentary clear bottom kayaks or snorkeling equipment on loan, or perhaps opt-in for an afternoon of jet-skiing, scuba, and other water frolics. Whatever their endeavors, one thing's for certain. The waters induce a state of flow, eradicating messes modern-day bestows, and it's these disconnects that allow partners to truly reconnect at Wymara.

A number of Zest's items appear on the in-room menu, including lobster tacos, jerked fillet of red snapper, and more. You can enjoy them equally from the comfort of the beach or in the resort's upscale dining destination for the magic to brew. Headed by Chef Andrew Mirosch, the Caribbean-inspired menu centers around fresh, seasonal ingredients, sustainable seafood, and local produce. Standouts at the time of publishing include the Caribbean Mahi Mahi and Roasted Cauliflower Steak, best enjoyed with their Sommelier's fine wine recommendation. If sweetheart has a sweet tooth; the Lava Cake with homemade ice cream will not disappoint.

Finally, as a beachfront resort, the opportunity for romance under starlight is not passed up. Beach barbecue events are held frequently during the week, taking full advantage of the whimsical outdoor space in the company of island acoustics, a crackling fire pit, and meticulous service. In terms of dining, Jorge simply states "The possibilities here for romantic gestures like proposals, are endless."

resounding success with their conscious guests. Wymara has a key-less entry system in place (i.e., no keys), and toiletries come in refillable bottles in order to reduce waste, either reusable or electronic, and they have even gone as far as to redesign their water system to allow for repurposing, recover and reuse of water for landscaping. Sustainability is Wymara’s way of loving the planet, and that surely is the greatest base for love to blossom on the Caribbean’s most romantic resort.
