SAVE THE DATE: BLOOD DRIVE @ THE CLUBHOUSE

Did you know? Less than 1% of South Africans are active blood donors. SANBS has a daily target of collecting 3 000 units to ensure sufficient blood supply levels within the health care system. With a unit of blood only lasting 42 days after donation, it is important that those who can, donate regularly. Donors are able to donate as often as every eight weeks.

The Journey of Blood:

- A unit of blood is drawn from a volunteer donor who attends a blood drive.
- This is collected into a sterile bag and labelled.
- The units are transported to the nearest SANBS testing and processing lab.
- In the processing lab – the blood is spun down in a centrifuge and separated into its different components – red blood cells, platelets and plasma.
- Blood is tested to ensure its safe for transfusion.
- Local hospitals place orders with SANBS for blood products based on their needs.
- Blood products are stored prior to transfusion- the shelf life is limited. Platelets expire in 5 days. Red Blood Cells expire in 42 days and plasma has a shelf life of a year from the day of collection.
- Blood is transfused to patients in need.

"The SANBS values its blood donors, as we could not fulfill our lifesaving mission to the South African community without the support of blood donors."
