

WEEKEND READINGS

Twenty-second Sunday in Ordinary Time Vigésimo Segundo Domingo del Tiempo Ordinario

This Sunday invites us to recognize that following Christ does not always mean understanding where God is leading us. Like Peter, we may want the glory of resurrection without first accepting the reality of the Cross. We may sometimes wonder why faithfulness brings struggle, disappointment, or pain. Yet God does not waste our struggles; through them, he can transform our hearts and renew our minds. The Cross teaches us to surrender not because our lives are insignificant, contrarily matter deeply to God. When we let go of our need to control the outcome, we make room to see our lives through God's eyes. Perhaps the invitation this week is simply to ask, "Lord, what are you trying to transform in me?", in that surrender, we may discover what feels like losing our life, may actually be the very place where Christ is leading us to find it.

¿Este domingo nos invita a reconocer que seguir a Cristo no siempre significa comprender hacia dónde nos está llevando Dios. Como Pedro, podemos desear la gloria de la Resurrección sin antes aceptar la realidad de la Cruz. A veces podemos preguntarnos por qué la fidelidad trae consigo luchas, decepciones o dolor. Sin embargo, Dios no desperdicia nuestros sufrimientos; a través de ellos, puede transformar nuestro corazón y renovar nuestra mente. La Cruz nos enseña a entregarnos, no porque nuestras vidas sean insignificantes, sino porque somos profundamente importantes para Dios. Cuando dejamos de aferrarnos a la necesidad de controlar el resultado, hacemos espacio para ver nuestra vida con los ojos de Dios. Quizás la invitación de esta semana sea simplemente preguntarnos: «Señor, ¿qué estás tratando de transformar en mí?». Y en esa entrega, podemos descubrir que aquello que parece ser perder nuestra vida puede ser precisamente el lugar donde Cristo nos está llevando a encontrarla.
