

WEEKEND READINGS

Fifth Sunday of Easter
Quinto Domingo De Pascua

As we hear Christ say, "It is expedient for you that I go," we are invited to trust that His absence is not abandonment but a path to deeper faith. Like the disciples, we may long for a visible, tangible closeness, yet we are called to lift our hearts beyond what we can see and feel. In letting go of our need for constant reassurance, we begin to discover a more profound union with the risen Lord. For He does not leave us alone, He promises the coming of the Holy Spirit, the Paraclete, who dwells within us. This Spirit strengthens us not by removing our struggles, but by giving us courage to live with truth, humility, and love. Even in trials, we are empowered to witness to Christ with a quiet but steadfast faith. Let us remember our comfort is found in Christ, not the world. So let us pray with longing hearts, "Come, Holy Spirit," and allow Him to shape us into faithful disciples who live always for Christ.

Al escuchar a Cristo decir: "Les conviene que yo me vaya", somos invitados a confiar en que su ausencia no es abandono, sino un camino hacia una fe más profunda. Como los discípulos, podemos anhelar una cercanía visible y tangible, pero estamos llamados a elevar nuestro corazón más allá de lo que vemos y sentimos. Al soltar nuestra necesidad de constantes consuelos, comenzamos a descubrir una unión más profunda con el Señor resucitado. Porque Él no nos deja solos: nos promete la venida del Espíritu Santo, el Paráclito, que habita en nosotros. Este Espíritu no elimina nuestras luchas, sino que nos da la fuerza para vivir con verdad, humildad y amor. Aun en medio de las pruebas, somos fortalecidos para dar testimonio de Cristo con una fe firme y constante. Recordemos que nuestro consuelo se encuentra en Cristo, no en el mundo. Por eso, oremos con anhelo: "Ven, Espíritu Santo", y permitamos que Él nos transforme en discípulos fieles que viven siempre para Cristo.
