Feast For The Future The Soul Beneath Our Feet Farm to Table

Dear Community Leader,

We are writing to you as the founders of Freedom Freedom Foundation and Black Oregon Land Trust, organizations deeply committed to transforming food systems and empowering communities through land justice and food sovereignty. Together, we are hosting Feast for the Future: The Soul Beneath Our Feet, our inaugural joint fundraising event that embodies our shared vision of thriving, self-determined Black communities rooted in regenerative agriculture and secure land access.

Our partnership is exemplified through Arthur and Shantae Johnson, who lead Freedom Freedom and operate Mudbone Grown, living and farming on land owned by BOLT. Freedom Freedom focuses on training older youth and young adults in climate-resilient farming and cooperative food systems, while Black Oregon Land Trust offers nature-based education and land access for emerging Black farmers. Together, we create an intergenerational continuum of learning, land stewardship, and community empowerment that demonstrates how our organizations provide secure land access for Black farmers feeding our communities.

This isn't just a fundraiser—it's a ritual gathering rooted in community, creativity, and culture. This event will feature storytelling, ceremony, and performances alongside a farm-to-table meal crafted with local, Black-grown ingredients. Guests will meet the farmers, educators, and artists shaping this work while experiencing the creative brilliance of our communities.

Your sponsorship will directly advance Freedom Freedom's new regional food hub serving BIPOC producers and partners, and BOLT's Learning Farm programming where youth, families, and adults learn regenerative food systems and cultural land practices. Because food security requires land security, your investment sustains a replicable model for Black-led land and food systems that addresses root causes while recognizing that Black farmers and land stewards are leading the way toward regenerative, just, and abundant futures.

By partnering with us as a sponsor, you become part of a movement that's creative, cultural, and intergenerational—and already happening. Your support will be recognized throughout our extensive marketing campaign while demonstrating your organization's commitment to community-rooted solutions that bring people into relationship with the land, the food they eat, and the Black farmers and artists who sustain our communities.

In solidarity and gratitude,

Shantae Johnson & Qiddist Ashe
