

Wendy Williams Dines with Friends at N.Y.C. Restaurant amid Hopes to End Her Guardianship

Williams previously told PEOPLE that she felt ending the guardianship was "long overdue"

Wendy Williams is seen having dessert at Fresco by Scotto on April 11, 2025 in New York City. PHOTO: MICHAEL SIMON/GETTY

- Wendy Williams was photographed having dinner with some friends at the Fresco by Scotto restaurant in New York City on Friday, April 11
- The former talk show host has indicated that she wants to end her guardianship, previously telling PEOPLE it's "long overdue"
- Her guardian, Sabrina Morrissey, said that "once Ms. Williams undergoes testing and a full evaluation, the results will inform the next steps for Ms. Williams' care"

Wendy Williams is spending some time with friends amid her ongoing fight to end her guardianship.

The former talk show host, 60, was photographed having dinner and dessert — complete with festive sparklers — with several friends at the Fresco by Scotto restaurant in New York City on Friday, April 11.

In the photos, Williams can be seen smiling and laughing while wearing a black dress. One shot shows a dessert plate — sprinkled with strawberries and blueberries on the side — placed in front of the TV star.

This comes more than a week after Williams opened up to PEOPLE about what she hopes to accomplish if her guardianship comes to an end, including finding love and traveling around the world, including to Paris.

From left: Baruch Shemtov, Alex Finnie, Wendy Williams and Rosanna Scotto dine at Fresco by Scotto in N.Y.C. on April 11, 2025. PHOTO: MICHAEL SIMON/GETTY

KEY GROUP WORLDWIDE
NEWS