What's going on in the library?

March is on the march and will be here in a few days! Will it arrive like a lion or a lamb? However it comes, it is a month of "madness" and the "mystery" will be: What will the weather be today? How can I beat the weather changes that affect my moods?

My solution to the problems March can cause: curl up with a good mystery book. We have several on our shelves. These are some of my favorite authors/books.

Marie Benedict The Mystery of Mrs. Christie

Marie Benedict The Queens of Crime

Richard Osman The Thursday Murder Club (and others in the series)

Delia Owens Where the Crawdad's Sing.

There are many, many more from which to choose. I estimate that 70% of the books in our collection are Mystery/Thriller fiction—not to mention the nonfiction shelf of True Crimes.

You will also notice that there is a different arrangement of books on the shelves. This was done to create more space for additional books. The Western books have been moved to the shelves between the end of Fiction and the beginning of NonFiction. The signs have been repositioned too. The DVDs and Audiobooks have been moved to where the Westerns used to be—more visible to the eye, I hope!

A puzzle table was donated. To make room for it, the long table has been moved and a smaller one now sits next to the new puzzle table. Both are in the same location across from the small classroom.

All of this was done to help you find the books you like!

Protecting Our Elders: The Rise of Microsoft Email Scams

You received an email with the title being Microsoft Account, the email will tell you that there is unusual activity on your account and sometimes give you a phone number to call. They pretend to be technology support and their goal is to access your computer remotely to get information they can use such as login and password information for your bank accounts. Review the email address closely to see if the email address actually did come from Microsoft or have someone else review the email before contacting the phone number.

In today's digital age, email scams have become a prevalent threat to online users, with one particular scheme gaining notoriety for its targeting of the elderly population: Microsoft email scams. These scams involve fraudulent emails claiming to be from Microsoft, often with the intent to deceive recipients into disclosing sensitive information or installing malicious software on their devices. The elderly, in particular, are frequently targeted due to their perceived vulnerability to technological scams. In this blog post, we delve into the rise of Microsoft email scams targeting the elderly and explore ways to protect our seniors from falling victim to these fraudulent schemes.

- Be vigilant and skeptical of unsolicited emails, especially those with alarming subject lines or requests for personal information. Hover over links to verify their destination before clicking and to avoid downloading attachments from unknown sources.
- Verify the legitimacy of email communications by contacting the purported sender through official channels rather than clicking on links or providing personal information.
- Seek assistance from trusted family members, friends, or caregivers when dealing with suspicious emails or unfamiliar online activities. Having a support network can help them navigate potential threats more effectively.
