

Here are a few resources that may be particularly helpful:

- Quality of Life Scale for Pets: A guide for pet parents to understand and support their pets' well-being —
<https://www.codapet.com/quality-of-life-scale/pet-info>
- Local Veterinarians in Richmond, VA: Connect your clients with our compassionate in-home veterinary care —
<https://www.codapet.com/cities/richmond-va>
- CodaPet Logo: [Attached file]

Families in your community can now connect with our local veterinarians, Dr. Jennifer Holman and Dr. Angela Schmillen, both locals who are dedicated to providing respectful care during a pet's final chapter.

We understand how sensitive and emotional this stage of a pet's life can be. Many families look to trusted local organizations for guidance—especially when they're unsure where to turn or what resources exist. Our main pure purpose is simply to make you aware that this support is available in your area.

To assist you in helping families who may be navigating these difficult moments, we're sharing:

✓ An End-of-Life Care Toolkit that offers supportive, educational resources (file attached)

The toolkit is designed to guide pet parents during such tough times with list of informative resources. It includes guidance on:

- Recognizing signs of declining quality of life
- Knowing when veterinary support may be helpful
- Understanding compassionate in-home care options
- Accessing articles, tools, and grief resources for both before and after goodbye

We hope these materials provide help and clarity to pet parents who may come to you with questions or concerns.