

BLUEPRINTS AND BOUNCE PASSES

Fitz and Kin were the definition of middle school legends.
Best friends since forever. Basketball stars. Neighborhood go-kart racers.

FITZ AND KIN WEREN'T JUST ATHLETES— THEY WERE ROLE MODELS.

FITZ HAD A SMOOTH JUMP SHOT.

KIN HAD SPEED LIKE HE WAS SECRETLY POWERED BY SNACKS AND MOTIVATION.

Something started changing with Fitz.
At first, it was small.
He stayed in more after school.
He was quieter during hangouts.

One afternoon, Kin finally asked,
“Bro... what’s going on with you?”

Fitz showed him: a three-level model building
he had been designing.

Kin wasn't sure how to feel.
Fitz had never mentioned this before.
Not once.

It felt like Fitz had a whole secret life...
and Kin wasn't invited.

After that, things changed.
Just... distance.
Kin started hanging out
with other teammates more.
Fitz felt it.
And he didn't understand it.

Fitz sat in his room
staring at his model building.

"I didn't even do anything wrong," he muttered.

He just wanted both.

He wanted his best friend back.

His dad smiled slightly. "Don't shrink yourself to keep someone comfortable. Keep building your future."

His mom nodded. "But stay kind while you do it."

The next day, Fitz still saw Kin at school. They talked. But it wasn't the same. Kin had his group. Fitz had his sketches and design club.

ARCHITECTURE

Fitz joined architecture and design clubs.
Kin stayed on the basketball team.

Crowd cheers.
Kin was in his lane.
Fitz was in his.

They didn't hate each other.
They just weren't the same "together" anymore.
Sometimes they'd pass in the hallway and still say "what's up."

Different paths.
Same starting point.

And both shaped by the friendship they once shared.

Sometimes people don't stay in your exact chapter forever...
but they still help write the story.

BLUEPRINTS AND BOUNCE PASSES

Growth can change friendships,
but it doesn't erase their value.
People may grow in different directions,
and that's natural.
True friendship supports growth—
even when paths separate.
