Dear Dr. Hans Henry P. Kluge,

On March 2, I sent you the attached letter (see below). I would be most grateful to know whether you have had an opportunity to consider the matters I raised in it.

The reason I do not longer have time to applying for FENSA or similar arrangements with the WHO is, firstly, that I will be turning 78 this year. Like everyone else, I do not grow younger with time. Secondly, I am not aware of any organization whose priorities align with those of my association, www.isci.is.

Those of us who have studied health sciences are all familiar with the stories of Ignaz Semmelweis, Louis Pasteur, Jonas Salk, and others, and the challenges they faced in convincing others and raising awareness—efforts that ultimately led to great advances for humanity. I do not compare myself to these distinguished figures; however, I firmly believe that if the WHO were to give neurological treatment/cure the focused attention I am advocating, it could ultimately result in significant benefits for humankind.

I therefore respectfully and sincerely ask you to help me.

Yours sincerely,
