CREMATION MISSION STATEMENT

We want you to make good, clear and rational decisions based on honest and unbiased information about cremation. We want to provide you with any and all information you may need, whether making arrangements in advance of need or on an at-need basis. Cremation may take place before or after a ceremony to honor the life of the deceased. In addition, the cremated remains, called cremains, may be scattered, stored or buried in a family plot in a cemetery. Cremated remains are generally placed in an urn. If the urn is then buried, the use of a cremation urn vault is usually recommended to prevent damage to the urn from the earth's elements. Many people bury a cremation urn on standard size burial plots or within family plots. Some cemeteries have special plots set aside to accommodate cremated remains. Cremation does not prevent family or friends from participating in the ceremony of a traditional funeral. In addition, cremation does not mean a family will not be able to participate in rituals that are part of their family tradition or customs. Selecting cremation is merely selecting a method of disposition just like burial or entombment.
