

SUPPORTING A LOVED ONE FROM A DISTANCE

Caring for someone you love—even when you live far away—can feel overwhelming. This one-page guide offers practical, reassuring tips to help you stay connected, coordinate care, and plan ahead with confidence.

Staying Connected from afar: Remain meaningfully involved and emotionally present, even at a distance.

- Create a regular routine for connection. Schedule consistent check-ins (calls, video chats, or texts) so your loved one knows when to expect you.
- Look for subtle changes. Pay attention to shifts in mood, memory, speech, or daily habits during conversations.
- Stay engaged in daily life. Ask about ordinary things: meals, neighbors, hobbies, not just medical issues.
- Use technology thoughtfully. Video calls, shared calendars, medication reminder apps, or smart devices can help you stay informed.
- Offer emotional reassurance. Remind your loved one (and yourself) that support doesn't require being physically present to be meaningful.

Coordinating Care and Communication: Work effectively with people on the ground and keep information organized.

- Identify local helpers. This may include nearby family, friends, neighbors, faith communities, or professional caregivers.
- Clarify roles early. Agree on who handles appointments, emergencies, finances, and routine check-ins.
- Centralize information. Keep a shared list of medications, providers, contacts, and important documents in one accessible place.
- Communicate clearly and calmly. Use group texts, shared notes, or scheduled updates to reduce confusion and stress.
- Advocate with confidence. Ask questions, request updates, and speak up when something doesn't seem right.

Planning Ahead and Knowing When to Step In: Prepare for future needs and make decisions without panic or guilt.

- Anticipate changes before a crisis. Discuss preferences for care, living arrangements, and decision-making early.
- Watch for warning signs. Increased falls, missed medications, isolation, confusion, or caregiver burnout may signal a need for more support.
- Know your options. Learn about in-home care, adult day programs, care management, and local resources before they're urgently needed.
- Trust your instincts. If something feels off, it's okay to pause, ask for help, or reassess the plan.
- Release guilt. Doing the best you can from a distance is still real caregiving.

For more information, resources, or support- please call and schedule a consultation with a social worker.