After lunch, Lunchtime Supervisors supervise children in the playground (or in the hall or classroom in wet weather), stop any dangerous behaviour, deal with any quarrels or fights, comfort children who are upset, they may deal with and follow procedures for minor injuries such as cuts, grazes and bruises, and they may organise games.

Planning, Organising and Controlling

1. Most activities are undertaken in accordance with a predictable daily set routine.
2. Lunchtime Supervisors may have designated areas and/or classes to supervise. These may be rotated on a regular basis or to address staffing issues.
3. The work is reactive in terms of responding to children's behaviour and any incidents or accidents that occur.
4. Supervision is constant and immediate to handle any issues from the children that may need to be escalated to a professional member of staff.
5. The Lunchtime Supervisors can decide which group of children needs more of their attention and when they need to refer more serious issues to a professional member of staff e.g. the jobholder is able to prioritise monitoring children in the dining room to ensure that they are eating healthy lunches.
6. The jobholder can decide within the scope of task which is the most appropriate to do first for example, which set of tables to put away first and when to clean the floor.
7. These roles have to work to direct instructions as to where and when they supervise children and maintain the school's view of what is considered to be good behaviour, for example, no ball games in certain areas.
9. The school sets clear objectives regarding when and where children have their lunches and break time. There are policies and procedures and approved sanctions to use for managing behaviour.

Communication

Usual basic courtesy in everyday relationships is required. A successful outcome depends on working co-operatively with other members of the team. The jobholder must be able to share information and concerns about children with their colleagues and teaching staff.

The jobholder must be able to communicate effectively with children to make them aware of school rules, to encourage them to eat healthy lunches, to manage their behaviour and deal with any incidents.

Thinking Environment

There are written rules to follow, and the jobholder will need to use their initiative to decide what action needs to be taken with regard to behaviour and welfare issues. For instance, if a child becomes unwell or misbehaves; the Lunchtime Supervisor must decide if it can be handled by them or requires a trained or more senior person to be involved.

Although the Lunchtime Supervisor is not required to have first aid training they may be required to learn certain procedures, such as how to use an Epi-pen. They need to also learn which children have food allergies and the procedure to follow if an allergic reaction is seen.

Lunchtime Supervisors deal with most situations by using their own judgement, but anything over and above the normal pattern of play and behaviour will be referred to a professional member of staff. For example, depending on the seriousness of the injury an accident and a cut will be referred to a first aider.

Thinking Challenge

Most situations, if out of the ordinary, are referred to a professional member of staff, otherwise the Lunchtime Supervisor will be using what they have done previously in the past and what has worked well to maintain good behaviour in the playground.

Lunchtime Supervisors follow a routine of how to tidy away the lunchtime furniture to ensure the exercise is completed as quickly as possible and within the timescale given.

Freedom to Act

Lunchtime Supervisors have discretion over which children's behaviour to focus on in the dining room and playground.

Within the school rules and guidelines, they can use their discretion to decide what information regarding children and incidents to pass on to teaching staff.

There are school rules and clear guidance and supervision from professional staff to assist the jobholder in their understanding of these.

Physical Effort and/or Strain

The job requires physical effort when setting up and clearing away the dining room. Tables and chairs are moved in accordance with manual handling procedures.

Working Environment

Playground duty is carried out at all times of the year including during cold and windy conditions. Break times normally take place indoors during wet weather conditions.
