Why the Teacher Reuse Exchange Matters - Every year, teachers invest hundreds of dollars from their own pockets to ensure their students have the supplies and resources needed to succeed. Recent studies estimate that educators spend more than $895 annually on classroom materials, often purchasing everything from pencils and paper to books, manipulatives, and classroom décor. For many teachers, these expenses create a financial burden. Yet, they continue to make these sacrifices because they are committed to creating welcoming, engaging, and effective learning environments where students can thrive.

The Teacher Reuse Exchange (TRE) exists to help ease that burden while promoting environmental sustainability. Our mission is to provide an outlet for the donation, repurposing, and reuse of new and gently used teacher, school, community, and business discards. By diverting valuable resources from landfills and placing them back into the hands of educators and nonprofits, we create a sustainable solution that benefits both people and the planet.

When you support the Teacher Reuse Exchange, you are investing in education, sustainability, and our community's future.
