Dealing in Bulk and Wheeling in Mulch - The Friends' First Book Sale

The Friends of the Trimble County Public Library have been hard at work! On April 25th and 26th, the Friends held their very first book sale with the goal of fundraising for some exciting updates to the library. Many stopped in to say hello, browse tables upon tables of books, movies, magazines, games, and other goodies. It was all the fun of a used bookstore but with the bonus of a specific purpose in mind!

Not only was the event a fun way for the community to shop, but the Friends' efforts also raised over $800 for some exciting new things at the library. Proceeds from the book sale are going towards new mulch for the library playground as well as a sensory table for the children's area in the library.

A big thanks to everyone in the community who stopped by, the Friends for putting the event together, and the volunteers from LG&E who spread the mulch over the playground!

Matt Milosevich Brings the Thunder!

As part of our jam-packed catalog of spring break programs in April, WLKY meteorologist and local TV personality Matt Milosevich paid a visit to the library! Attendees of all ages gathered to see him in the flesh rather than over the airwaves. Children were entertained with activities and experiments, adults had their questions answered and curiosity quenched, and his knowledge of past weather events fascinated those who were around to experience them.

Whether you missed out or got to attend, you might like to know that Milosevich enjoyed his time in our neck of the woods enough to forecast his return. (Not yet enough data for a timeframe – stay tuned!) In the meantime, you can always find him in early mornings and afternoons on your TV screen, pointing out the splashes of green and yellow coming our way on the radar.

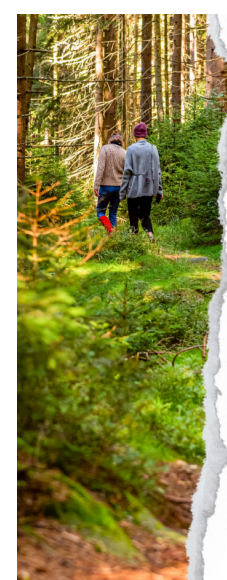

History Preservation Project: Payne Hollow

In keeping with many other recent programs at the library, a project to document some local history regarding the Hubbards and their lives at Payne Hollow has been developing with the help of some hard-working homeschoolers. On Saturday, May 10, interviews took place at the library, during which local community members shared their memories of the Hubbards with interviewer and Friend of the Library Beth Nichols.

Three local teens volunteered to help with these interviews by operating and monitoring the podcasting equipment used to record them. The project was a success not only in its original goal of capturing the stories of community members but also in igniting a passion for podcasting and creativity in the young volunteers.

Thanks to these teens, as well as those who volunteered to be interviewed and recorded, we will be able to preserve more of our county's rich local history for the decades ahead.
