Fourth Sunday of Lent

As Jesus passed by he saw a man blind from birth. His disciples asked him, "Rabbi, who sinned, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?" Jesus answered, "Neither he nor his parents sinned; it is so that the works of God might be made visible through him. We have to do the works of the one who sent me while it is day. Night is coming when no one can work. While I am in the world, I am the light of the world." When he had said this, he spat on the ground and made clay with the saliva, and smeared the clay on his eyes, and said to him, "Go wash in the Pool of Siloam" —which means Sent—. So he went and washed, and came back able to see. (Full text: John 9:1-41)

You were once darkness, but now you are light in the Lord.

The lengthy exchange in today's Gospel between the formerly blind man and the Pharisees serves as a reminder that we are all born blind and are given our sight at baptism, when we are first able to see through the eyes of faith. As our Lenten journey continues, let us pray that God will continue to open our eyes to his truth.

THE SISTERS OF SAINT JOSEPH OF CARONDELET AND OUR MAUI ROSE

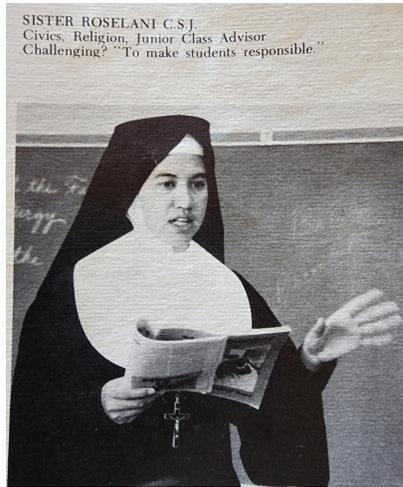

PART 1 by Mary Beth Costales | March 9, 2026

In 1939, a new chapter of faith and education began in Paia, Maui, when Mother Mary Albert Carroll from the order of Sisters of Saint Joseph of Carondelet opened a mission of the congregation where a convent and elementary school had been built. One hundred sixty children attended the school that first year. By 1949, the school had grown to an enrollment of 450 pupils.

Two years prior, on September 25, 1937, Dorothy "Dottie" Anne Kanani Enomoto was born to Annie and Toshi Enomoto. She was the eldest girl in a family of 11. From Sunnyside, close to Maunaolu, she and her siblings walked to school each day. There was a special shortcut through Rainbow Park that made the walk a little shorter.

Dorothy, who later became Sister Roselani, recounts the legacy of the Sisters who were excellent teachers, ensuring that every student felt included and respected. Many of the children still spoke Hawaiian in the early years, and the Sisters encouraged students to teach them Pidgin English so that they could understand and be understood, building a unique bridge of trust between the Sisters and the community.

Sister Roselani tells of another crucial role the sisters played during WWII when Maui transformed into a major military staging and training base. Between deployments, Marines from the 4th Division were housed at Camp Maui in Haiku.

1st year teaching high school at St. Mary's Academy in Los Angeles, 1963.

Named Vice-Provincial Superior in Hawaii, 1988

A few times each month, a number of these soldiers volunteered at Holy Rosary Church and School, maintaining the grounds, church, and chapel located in the convent. They sought the solitude of the church for prayer and the trust of the sisters for counsel, who guided the young soldiers through personal mental and physical trials. Strong bonds were formed, and even after the war, men returned to visit their confidantes.

Sisters made special visits to the family homes of students who attended Holy Rosary School. Every family was visited at least once a year, and sometimes more often. The children were taught to love Father Damien of Moloka'i, who lived among the lepers from 1873 until his death in 1889.

Sister sits back in her comfortable chair and starts chuckling. "The sisters were practical in their dispensation of justice." Remembering one incident with a great big smile, "If you play in the rain during recess, when you enter the classroom after recess, you will kneel until you are dry!"

Part 2 of this article about Sr. Roselani will be continued in next week's bulletin.
