Reflection

We are to love God and our neighbour with all the strength of our being, as the scholar of the Law answers Jesus in this weekend's Gospel. This command is nothing remote or mysterious—it's already written in our hearts, in the book of Sacred Scripture. "so that you can do it," Moses says in the First Reading. Jesus tells His interrogator the same thing: "Do this and you will live." The scholar, however, wants to know where he can draw the line. That's the motive behind his question, "And who is my neighbour?"

In his compassion, the Samaritan in Jesus' parable reveals the boundless mercy of God, Who came down to us when we were fallen in sin, close to dead, unable to pick ourselves up. Jesus is "the image of the invisible God," this weekend's Epistle tells us. In Him, the love of God has come very near to us. By the "blood of His Cross" — by bearing His neighbours' sufferings in His own body, being Himself stripped and beaten and left for dead — He saved us from the bonds of sin and reconciled us to God and to one another.

Like the Samaritan, He pays the price for us, heals the wounds of sin, pours out on us the oil and wine of the sacraments, and entrusts us to the care of His Church until He comes back for us.

Because His love has known no limits, ours cannot either. We are to love as we have been loved, to do for others what He has done for us, joining all things together in His Body, the Church. We are to love as proclaimed in the Psalm — like those whose prayers have been answered, like those whose lives have been saved, who have known the time of His favour, have seen God in His great mercy turn toward us.

This is the love that leads to eternal life, the love Jesus commands of the scholar and of each of us: "Go, and do likewise."
