CITIZENS OF THE YEAR

JOE M. MALAZO

Joe Malazo's dedication to youth development, business growth, and civic engagement, exemplifies what it means to be an engaged and service-minded citizen. An Eagle Scout, Joe raised his two sons through Scouting, first as a Cub Scout den leader and later as Scoutmaster of Scout Troop 17, eventually earning Wood Badge certification, Scouting America's premier advanced leadership training program. Outside of scouting, Joe has become a trusted financial advisor to small and midsize businesses. helping business owners secure financing and navigate the financial decisions that support sustainable growth. Mr. Malazo has served as Chair of the Dulles Regional Chamber of Commerce from 2023 to 2025 and has served on its Executive Board since 2020. During his chairmanship, he focused on strengthening community connections. Joe is also a member of the Rotary Club of Centreville-Chantilly and the Knights of Columbus; has participated on nonprofit boards; and on the Virginia Military Institute Parents Council. Joe leads by example, invests in people, and believes that a stronger community is built when we help one another grow and succeed.

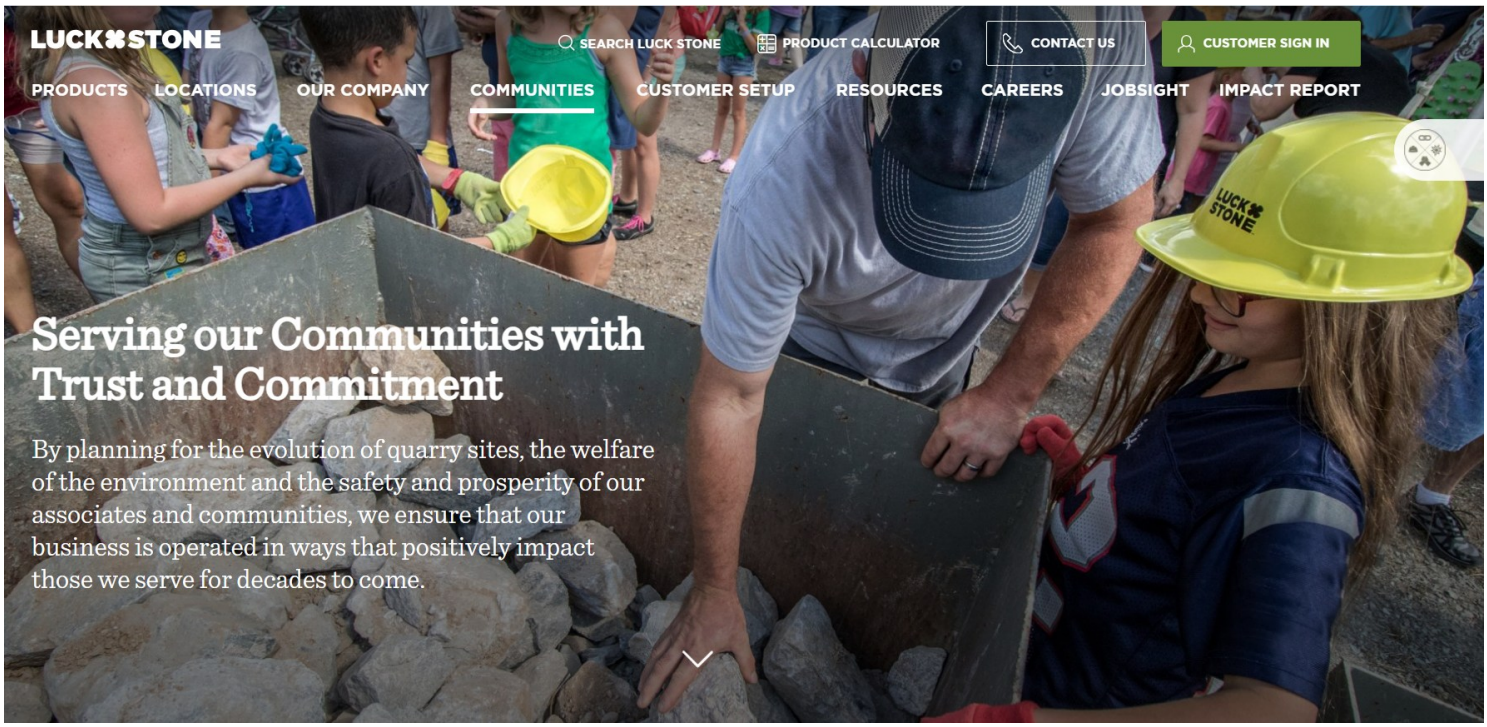

TERRY ANGELOTTI

Terry Angelotti is a remarkable community member whose dedication to service, advocacy, and civic engagement has made a meaningful difference in Centreville through her work with nonprofit organizations, including the Centreville Preschool Inc., Centreville Immigration Forum and FACETS. Terry's advocacy has focused on providing essential services, including transportation, medical and legal assistance, employment opportunities, and affordable housing. Ms. Angelotti has also served on the Centreville Study Task Force, the Sully Community Action Advisory Board, the Dulles Regional Chamber of Commerce Centreville Committee, where she helped to organize the State of Sully review. Terry was a volunteer for the Woodlands Stewardship Education Center camp program at Ellanor C. Lawrence Park this summer. Through these roles, she has helped to strengthen community connections and improve the lives of local residents. Her résumé may say "retired," but her energy, enthusiasm, and commitment to Centreville remain strong. Our recipient reminds us that meaningful civic leadership comes from listening, getting involved, and helping others.

REVEREND PHIL MOHR

Since 2017, Reverend Mohr has been a consistent voice for our community, guided by one important question: "How can we do this better?" A decon at Centreville United Methodist Church, Rev. Mohr supports youth ministries and outreach programs, including Knitting Nights, Upward Sports, and Friday Night Lights. His service extends globally through more than 25 mission trips, Early Response Team deployments, and volunteer work in the Czech Republic. During COVID, he creativity helped to secure church financing for a satellite refrigerator for Western Fairfax Christian Ministries at the Centreville Labor Resource Center. Food programs at UCM, including weekend food bags for elementary school children, have distributed over 1 million meals. Morh also oversees the church's clothing, toy and diaper ministries; provides ESL and citizenship classes; and leads immigrant and refugee support efforts in partnership with the Mayan League and Opportunity Neighborhood Centreville. With this award we honor Reverend Mohr's ability to turn faith into action, build partnerships, and find practical solutions that meet community needs and make Centreville stronger.

A VERY PUBLIC PLACE

This Centreville Day we are hosting a salute to taverns with Mellow Mushroom because, in a way, Centreville was a tavern before it was a town. Taverns also played an important role in the American Revolution. And so a salute to taverns seemed a fitting theme for our celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Our salute features Mellow Mushroom's Newgate Tavern Pie and Martha's Cherry Tang Mocktail. And there is live entertainment on the Tavern Stage, as you might have found in early days. You may note that it lacks something most people associate with taverns: alcoholic beverages. But beer, cider, toddy, and wine were not as important to the Revolutionary age tavern experience as you might think today. Taverns were places to eat, to stay overnight, and to conduct business. Attorneys took depositions in taverns and men lined up to vote in taverns (and yes, candidates who bought the house a round tended to do better than the candidates who did not). People, primarily men, discussed the events and ideas of the day in taverns (women discussed such matters in smaller groups at home, over tea or an herbal substitute once the tea boycotts began). The Boston Tea Party was planned in the Green Dragon public house in 1773. And in, May 1774, when Lord Dunmore dismissed the Virginia House of Burgesses rather than allow them to pass a resolution critical of the King; Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and Richard Henry Lee, among others, simply reconvened an independent legislature at the nearby Raleigh Tavern.

William Carr Lane built and established the Newgate tavern around 1768 on today's Braddock Road. For the travelers who passed through the little village, men like Thomas Jefferson and George Washington, the name of the tavern became the name of the place; it even appeared on maps. The Lanes were acquainted with Washington and they shared his political outlook. William's brother, Joseph Lane, signed the Leedstown Resolves alongside Richard Henry Lee and Newgate resident John Orr. Like the Fairfax Resolves, the Leedstown document was an agreement to boycott British goods until Parliament recognized the right of colonial governments to set taxes and make laws for themselves.

When the economic sanctions shifted to a conflict of arms, William Lane Junior, William Carr Lane's nephew, joined the Continental Army. He was commissioned as a captain in charge of a company in the Second Georgia Regiment in July 1776 (Georgia's population was small and recruiting was permitted in Virginia). Captain Lane spent much of the winter of 1776 organizing his company at Newgate. According to Lane family lore, Captain Lane served at the Battle of Camden in August 1780, though regimental records do not support this. It may be that he was engaged in the Siege of Savannah in 1779.

When Captain Lane and others returned from the war, there was a surge in economic activity. New taverns, like Joel Beach's House at the Sign of the Black Horse, opened. Mills and tanneries expanded. In 1792, Newgate's leading land-owners decided to make the place a town. They renamed it Centreville to emphasize it's advantageous location as a hub of enterprise, including taverns.
