The Dew Falls

(An Advent Hymn by Daniel Mitsui)

The dew falls on the dusty soil
That wheat may come, and wine, and oil.
The rain of justice, after drought,
Arrives to make a Savior sprout.
Behold the liquor from the sky
That Jesus Christ is gotten by.

A maiden in a wooded place
Hears hounds and hunters giving chase.
Their quarry sprints, evades the trap,
And rests its head upon her lap.
The noblest beast of mother born
Is Jesus Christ the unicorn.

The planets and the stars appear
To mark the season, day, and year.
They luminate the murky earth
And indicate a time for birth.
The welkin's brightest light by far
Is Jesus Christ the Morning Star.

The stone the builders cast aside
Is lovingkindness petrified.
It is as fulgent and as hard
As polished jasper, polished sard.
The choicest gem the earth has known
Is Jesus Christ the arkenstone.

The thorn and lily, wheat and tare
A scatter-seeded garden share.
And so together they shall bloom
Until the harvest day of doom.
The final judge of all that grows
Is Jesus Christ the Golden Rose.
