

Conversations You Should Be Having

Planning ahead and having important conversations is absolutely necessary at any age, for a variety of topics.

Have you begun to think about:

- Emergency medical care wishes
- Long-term care
- Your desired living situation
- Medical and financial powers of attorney
- Drafting a Will with the assistance of a professional, or updating it if necessary
- How your assets should be handled as you age and your needs change
- Meeting with a funeral director to hear all your options and put your wishes on paper

This is a brief overview. Unfortunately, we've seen a lot of people put these decisions off until it is too late. It's important to keep in mind that you can make changes to these decisions. What you decide now about healthcare or living situations can be reevaluated along the way. The good news is there are professionals, resources, and organizations available to help.
