RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

2016-2017

Dissertation Research, Spalding University, Louisville, KY

Disrupting the school to prison pipeline: REBT with at-risk African American juveniles in a school setting

Project consisted of implementing REBT with at-risk African American male juveniles in a school setting. Students with frequent behavioral problems were identified by school administrators. Utilizing a randomized controlled design, the experimental condition group received 12-weeks of REBT group therapy; the control group did not receive group treatment. Outcome data measuring disruptive behaviors, depression, anxiety, anger, and overall risk-level yielded significant findings consistent with the initial hypotheses.

2012-2017

Forensic Research Interest Group, Spalding University, Louisville, KY

- Collaborated in research projects from conceptualization to write-up;
- Read and discussed recent research in the field of forensic psychology;
- Collected data for Restorative Justice Research Project with Louisville Metro Corrections; administered risk assessments to juvenile offenders at court and participated in restorative justice conferences;
- Created a coding manual interpreting data from African prisons located in Kenya, Nigeria, Ghana, Rwanda, and Uganda. Data was collected by Dr. Uju Agomoh from Unugu, Nigeria, founder of Prisoners Rehabilitation and Welfare Action (PRAWA), in conjunction with the Prison Reform Intervention in Africa (PRIA).

2014

Program Evaluation: St. Joseph's Children's Home, Spalding University, Louisville, KY

- Evaluated the efficacy of St. Joseph's Therapeutic Foster Care training program, with emphasis on parent satisfaction and success;
- Created a survey measuring attitudes toward the training program, overall satisfaction, and objective and subjective measures of success;
- Presented findings to St. Joseph's staff about ways to improve their foster care program.

2011

Research Methods Thesis, Indiana University Southeast, New Albany, IN Minorities and attitudes toward organ donation

Project consisted of investigating minority attitudes toward organ donation through the distribution of a self-created survey. Data regarding beliefs about organ donation from a variety of minority groups were collected and analyzed.
