A message from the Pastor

You will be missing something if you don't . . .

Connect your experience of the cross with that of Jesus. It will be tempting over the course of this week to simply think of the last supper, his way of the cross, his suffering and his death, and ultimately his resurrection as historical events that happened 2000 years ago. It could be comfortable to relegate what Jesus went through as simply a spiritual battle he had to endure out of obedience so that he could gain for us spiritual freedom. It could be personally gratifying to think that what Jesus went through was all about you, something he did to free you from sins over which you have no control.

Instead, I believe the invitation is to live the events of Holy Week—the Palm Sunday Mass, the Mass of the Last Supper on Holy Thursday, the way of the cross and the adoration of the cross on Good Friday—as, opening up new ways to help us understand the times we live in now. Jesus' death was not only a battle for our spiritual souls, but it was also a battle with the real times in which he lived. There were real political and religious currents with which Jesus ran afoul, there were unjust rules against which Jesus preached and taught, there were prohibited actions which Jesus performed (healing on a sabbath). We have to see Jesus as not just engaged in a spiritual battle but also in a battle with the injustices of his times. It was these religious and political currents which ultimately brought about his demise—his death—which ultimately gained for us a spiritual victory.

My greatest worry as pastor of Our Lady of Guadalupe is that we will walk away from Sunday masses thinking “that was nice,” but in no way connecting us with the call and obligation to do justice in this world, to fight unjust systems, to speak out against untruths. The real times in which we find the majority of our members feeling afraid of being detained or deported, and why? Simply because they have felt called to pursue the American dream of providing for their families. We are missing something if we do not tie the events of this week to our own crosses, and our own call to do what Jesus did. In our times. Now.
