

One Enduring Mission

Impact Report | 2025

Leading with Purpose

Tara N. Burgess
Chief Executive Officer
EPIC - Every Person
Influences Children

As EPIC – Every Person Influences Children closes its 45th year of service to families and children, I am filled with gratitude and optimism for what lies ahead. This Impact Report reflects the strength of EPIC’s mission and the collective effort of families, staff, board members, partners, and supporters who believe that when caregivers are supported, children can thrive.

Families today are facing growing pressures and fewer supports at critical moments in their lives. EPIC exists to walk alongside families, offering education, connection, and prevention-focused support that builds confidence, resilience, and strong foundations for children. The stories and outcomes shared in these pages demonstrate the power of meeting families where they are and responding with compassion, respect, and practical tools.

This past year was also a meaningful milestone for EPIC. Celebrating 45 years allowed us to reflect on our roots while recommitting to the future. We strengthened relationships, expanded community engagement, and focused intentionally on stewardship and sustainability to ensure EPIC remains a trusted resource for families for generations to come.

I would also like to recognize an important leadership transition within our Board of Directors. In 2025, Sam Costa concluded four years as Board Chair. His leadership, counsel, and steady support were invaluable to me and to EPIC during his tenure. As we look ahead, we are pleased to welcome Brielynn Bell as Board Chair, and I look forward to continuing our strong partnership in the year ahead.

None of this work would be possible without the generosity and trust of our donors, partners, and community supporters. Your belief in EPIC allows us to respond to emerging needs, invest in prevention, and strengthen families before challenges become crises. Every contribution, financial, in kind, or through advocacy, plays a vital role in the impact you see here.

Thank you for being part of EPIC’s story. Together, we are building a future where families feel supported, children feel safe, and communities grow stronger.

With gratitude,

Tara N. Burgess
Chief Executive Officer

When families feel supported, children thrive. That belief guides everything we do at EPIC.

Our Mission, Vision & Values

EPIC is there for families when they need support most, helping caregivers feel capable, connected, and not alone, so children can grow up healthy, safe, and supported.

Our programs focus on building strong relationships and giving families the tools they need to thrive, now and in the future.

Our Mission

Strengthening families and building community to raise children who make a positive impact in the world.

Guided by Our Values

Everything we do at EPIC is grounded in three core beliefs:

We value all children and their potential to shape our future.

We value all families as the core foundation of a child's growth and wellbeing.

We value all communities and our combined ability to educate, advocate, and support children and families.

Our Vision

A world where every child has a strong start and a promising future.

How We Create Change

Parenting

Parents and caregivers gain confidence, practical skills, and support to build strong relationships and create safe, nurturing environments for their children.

- Ready, Set, Parent!
- Incredible Years: Baby & Toddler
- Families in Transition
- Just for Teens
- Strong African American Families (SAAF)
- Triple P: Positive Parenting Program
- Car Seat Safety

Family Engagement

Families strengthen connections, reduce isolation, and build supportive networks that help them thrive together at home and in their communities.

- Ready, Set, Read!
- Storytime
- Family Opportunity Centers
- Tiny Town at Monticello Central School District
- Early Care Services

parents and caregivers served across Families in Transition, Erie County Department of Social Services (ECDSS) Parent Training, Parent Partner and Niagara County Families in Transition.

EPIC's work is organized across four key program areas that support families at every stage of growth. Across every EPIC program is one consistent purpose: to strengthen the people and communities that influence a child's life. Through compassionate support, community-centered programs, and trusted connections, EPIC equips parents, caregivers, educators, and professionals with the tools, relationships, and resources children need to thrive.

Youth Services

Youth build resilience, develop healthy life skills, and make positive choices that support their well-being and future success.

- Pathways to Character
- Just for Me
- Tech Savvy

Professional Development

Educators and professionals strengthen their skills and understanding, improving the quality of support and care provided to children and families.

- Differentiated Family Engagement (DFE)
- Parenting Education for Agency Staff
- Dynamic Group Facilitation
- Understanding a Poverty Mindset
- Communication Skills for Challenging Conversations
- Conflict Management
- Raising Resilience
- Family Engagement Assessment & Planning

children received properly fitted car seats and caregiver safety education through 22 car seat safety sessions and events.

Where It All Began

EPIC began not with a program or strategic plan, but with one man's determination to turn profound personal tragedy into prevention.

Robert and Linda Wilson

Bob began asking a different question. Instead of only asking how this tragedy could have happened, he wanted to know “What might have prevented it?”

In 1977, Robert “Bob” Wilson’s wife of 39 years, Linda, was killed by a 15-year-old child living in foster care whom the family had befriended. In the grief that followed, Bob struggled to understand how someone so young could commit such a devastating act. As he learned more about the boy’s life, he discovered a childhood marked by instability, abuse, and neglect, including placement in eleven different foster homes and holding centers.

His daughter, Hope Wilson Hawkins, recalls in her memoir Sometimes I Feel: how those questions consumed him. He questioned why systems so often responded only after families and children were already in crisis. When another child’s death led Erie County to establish a task force, Bob, by his own admission unfamiliar with the social service system, was determined to be involved. His passion earned him a place at the table alongside educators and social workers.

The experience sharpened his conviction: helping children after something had gone terribly wrong was not enough. Families needed support earlier. Children needed caring adults around them from the beginning. Prevention, he believed, had to start “right at birth.”

Bob later wrote that he had dedicated the rest of his life to preventing other families from experiencing a tragedy like his own. His vision was bigger than parenting education alone. He imagined families, schools, and communities working together to influence children and help them develop the character and skills to become responsible adults.

In 1980, that vision became EPIC in Buffalo. Working from two desks at the United Way, Bob and the organization’s earliest leaders secured support from the Margaret L. Wendt Foundation and began building a prevention-focused organization grounded in a simple but powerful belief: Every Person Influences Children.

The Wilson Family

What began in heartbreak became a life’s purpose and ultimately a community movement.

In 2025, EPIC celebrated 45 years of carrying that purpose forward: strengthening families, supporting children and continuing the work Bob Wilson began so many years ago.

EPIC’s reach extends far beyond the individuals who participate directly in our programs. While it was too late to change what had happened to his wife, Wilson felt that it was not too late for others. That belief became EPIC.

45 years of Influence

In 2025, EPIC marked 45 years of strengthening families, supporting children, and building community with a celebration that brought together the people who have helped shape the organization's past, present, and future. The milestone honored how far EPIC has come while also reaffirming what comes next: continuing to build on Bob Wilson's vision and ensuring that families have the support, tools, and community they need to thrive for generations to come.

The evening was more than a recognition of longevity. It was an opportunity to reflect on the vision Robert Wilson set in motion in 1980 and to celebrate the generations of staff, board members, partners, donors, and community champions who have carried that vision forward. EPIC's history has been one of growth and change, but its foundation has remained constant: prevention, strong families, and the belief that every person has the ability to positively influence a child. One of the evening's most meaningful moments connected the celebration directly to EPIC's beginnings. Hope Wilson Hawkins, daughter of founder Robert Wilson, shared a passage from her book, Sometimes I Feel, which recounts her family's story and the deeply personal circumstances that inspired her father to create EPIC. Her words brought Bob Wilson's determination and passion to life and served as a powerful reminder of the purpose behind the organization's founding.

The celebration also recognized an important moment in EPIC's leadership. Samuel Costa was honored as he concluded four years as President of EPIC's Board of Directors. His steady leadership, counsel, and commitment to EPIC were invaluable during a period of continued growth and change. At the same time, EPIC welcomed Brielynn Bell as its new Board Chair, beginning a new chapter of board leadership as the organization looks toward its next 45 years.

Two long-time members of the EPIC family were also recognized for extraordinary contributions to the organization and its mission:

EPIC opens Tiny Town in Monticello.

2024: The Family Opportunity Center at Buffalo Public School #80 opens.

2025

Over the past 45 years, the world around families has changed dramatically. What has not changed is the need for parents and children to connect, communicate, and grow together. EPIC has evolved alongside families, adapting our programs to meet changing needs while staying rooted in the same purpose that began our work in 1980.

The impact of those 45 years cannot be measured only by the number of people EPIC has served. When parents and caregivers gain new skills, those lessons can shape not only how they raise their children today, but how those children grow, lead, and one day raise families of their own.

When educators and professionals learn through EPIC, that knowledge reaches countless children and families beyond the person we directly trained.

That is the true reach of EPIC: impact that moves from one person to another, strengthens families and communities, and carries forward to the next generation.

The True Reach of EPIC:
Impact that moves from one person to another, strengthens families and communities, and carries forward to the next generation.

What Support Makes Possible

A Story of Impact

Jessica Miller, Program Graduate and Entrepreneur

There was a time in Jessica Miller's life when she felt alone.

As a teenager navigating significant challenges, she was searching for support, connection, and reassurance that she could build a positive future for herself and her family. Through EPIC, she found a place where she was welcomed without judgment, encouraged to recognize her strengths, and reminded that she did not have to navigate life's challenges on her own.

Her work is rooted in a simple but powerful belief: people thrive when they feel supported, connected, and empowered.

Reflecting on her own journey, Jessica often speaks about healing, growth, and the importance of investing in yourself one step at a time.

Today, she uses those lessons to encourage others. Through community-based programs, wellness initiatives, mentoring, and advocacy, she is creating spaces where people can find the same sense of support and belonging that helped shape her own path. One of those initiatives, GIO Get It Out!, was created in honor of her late brother Giovanni and reflects her commitment to helping others navigate life's challenges with strength and hope.

While the specific programs EPIC offers have evolved over the past 45 years to meet the changing needs of children and families, our purpose remains the same: helping people recognize their strengths, build resilience, and create brighter futures.

Today, Jessica is extending to others the same kind of support she once received, creating spaces where people feel seen, supported, and empowered to reach their full potential.

That is what support makes possible.

That experience stayed with her.

Over the years, Jessica faced obstacles that could have easily defined her story. She navigated personal loss, experienced domestic violence, and worked to build stability for herself and her children.

Yet through each challenge, she continued moving forward, drawing on her resilience, her faith, and her belief that growth is possible even in life's most difficult moments.

Today, Jessica is a mother, entrepreneur, advocate, and community leader.

She earned a Bachelor's degree in Psychology with a focus on learning behavior and a certification in Child Advocacy Studies. She is the owner of Ink Euphoria Tattoo Studio and the founder of Be.PROUD, an initiative dedicated to helping individuals embrace Purpose, develop Resilience, remain Open to growth, deepen Understanding, and practice Discernment.

“There was a version of me that prayed for this life.”
- Jessica Miller

EPIC's teen support work continues today through programs such as Just for Teens, which provide parenting education, life skills, and community connections for young parents.

Support Without Judgment

Programs may change with the times, but EPIC's approach has remained constant: compassionate, respectful support that meets people where they are.

Five Years of Adventure Wednesdays

A Story of Impact

What began as a chance stop at Canalside became a five-year family tradition.

For Summer H. and her children, EPIC's Storytime at Canalside has grown into something they look forward to each week: a morning of books, hands-on learning, movement, creativity, and time together. Her children even gave it their own name — "Adventure Wednesday."

"Five years ago, I was out on a walk with my son at Canalside when we stumbled upon the EPIC Storytime program, and we've been hooked ever since. From that very first day, I knew this wasn't your typical 'read a book and go' kind of storytime. This was something truly special.

Each week brings not just a beautifully read story, but a full, thoughtfully planned experience complete with themed crafts, science, and STEM tie-ins, movement breaks, and opportunities for imaginative play.

Five years later, we're still attending Storytime at Canalside weekly, now with my younger child joining in on the fun. It has become a core part of our summer routine. In fact, my kids have nicknamed it 'Adventure Wednesday.' We pack a picnic lunch, enjoy the morning of learning and fun at Storytime, and then walk around Canalside. It makes for such a great day together.

Everyone involved in Storytime is nothing short of amazing. Every person we've interacted with has been kind, welcoming, and truly engaging with the kids. My children love Ms. Ferguson. They call her their 'Storytime teacher.'

She greets them each week with a big smile and makes them feel seen and special.

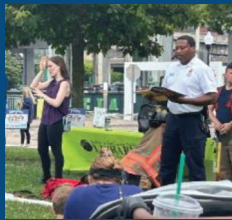

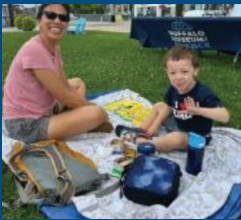

The book themes are always creative and exciting, and the special guests over the years have been unforgettable, from firefighters and musicians to therapy dogs, superheroes, hockey players, and even Sabretooth.

Thank you for being such an important part of our summers. You've created not just a program, but a tradition my children will carry with them as they grow."

- Summer H.

Adventure Wednesday

A Community of Learning

Storytime comes to life through the collaboration of community partners who help transform books into hands-on experiences that spark curiosity, creativity, movement, and family connection.

Serving in 2025

EPIC's impact in 2025 was made possible by the leadership, commitment, and collective efforts of our Board of Directors, organizational leadership, and staff. Together, they provided the governance, expertise, and day-to-day dedication needed to advance EPIC's mission and strengthen families and communities.
