from water to self-reliance

In 2015 when the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) was adopted to eradicate poverty, the goal to "leave no one behind" was established. HOPE works to assure that neglected and remote communities can begin their path to self-reliance.

Why water?

We all need water to live. Having access to clean water is important in many aspects of our lives and indispensable to obtaining an education and growing an economy. Clean water sources improve public health, increase children's enrollment in schools, and also empower women.

HOPE's sustained engagement in resolving water, health and food security issues are designed to help realize by 2030 the SDGs that were adopted by the UN to address global challenges. Many organizations, including HOPE, are working to end global poverty by focusing on these SDGs.

[ HOPE's Country of Implementation ] Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia

While experiencing rapid economic growth, the gap between rich and poor is expanding

Ethiopia, in spite of its problems of families and ethnic conflicts, has been experiencing remarkable economic growth in recent years. But many rural farming communities have not benefited from this growth and they are a world apart from the capital Addis Ababa. There are many communities in the HOPE project region where there is no electricity, gas, or water services, and due to the difficult living conditions and limited cash incomes, it is almost impossible for local communities to escape the negative cycle of poverty.

Harsh circumstances at project sites as seen by our Executive Director

In October 2019, Jeffrey Behr became the Executive Director of HOPE Japan. Immediately after taking up the position, Behr visited Ethiopia and apart from inspecting the progress of HOPE's project implementation, he also saw the difficult circumstances of the people living in rural communities.

"Garbanza Galo is a four and a half hours' drive on precarious mountain roads from Arba Minch. HOPE has yet to build a water supply system there, so the local villagers fetch water from distant water points in the neighboring village or from local streams and springs. Carrying heavy water cans on foot is a huge burden for the mothers and children who fetch water. Water from streams and some springs are never safe to drink, and often is the cause of dysentery, diarrhea and other diseases.

Encouraging residents to become independent

HOPE does not just construct water supply systems. We also provide support in creating a community-based management committee and in providing knowledge and the skills necessary for maintenance of the water systems. HOPE encourages the local communities to become self-reliant and to rely less on outside organizations for their development in becoming independent.

[Voices of the community] HOPE helps people regain their dignity

"Before HOPE come to my village two year's ago, I used to fetch water from a spring nearby. The amount of water decreased in the dry seasons and the water got muddy in the rainy seasons, but I had no choice... and I didn't like the fact that animals used the same water source. I didn't feel good drinking from the same spring as the animals. However, thanks to HOPE, we now have a water point, and we can fetch clean water conveniently." (Kabre Kautsa)
