

General Price List

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC), through its Funeral Rule, requires that every funeral home give to customers and others who request it a General Price List that discloses prices and other information in specific ways. The minimum information contained in a GPL, but not its format, is specified by the Funeral Rule.

The FTC has published generic price lists that show how a funeral home can comply with the Funeral Rule. The prices of all of the services and merchandise that the business offers for sale must be listed, but the business is not required to offer all of the items covered by the Funeral Rule or shown in our example. Any funeral home may offer additional services and merchandise.

The New York State Department of Health imposes requirements that are more detailed than those of the Funeral Rule. All GPLs in New York State must present the prices of services and merchandise in a similar order and must contain state-mandated disclosures that sometimes differ in wording from those required by the FTC. The state requirements result in some redundant statements on GPLs—one form of a statement as mandated by the state, the other form as mandated by the FTC. Our generic GPL reflects these dual requirements and identifies FTC-mandated statements thus: “FTC–.”
