Recommendation

Rather than sending just one email, create a 5-email follow-up sequence for each prospective Market Partner:

- Email 1: Introduce the opportunity.
- Email 2: Explain the benefits of territory ownership.
- Email 3: Show earning scenarios and examples.
- Email 4: Answer common questions and objections.
- Email 5: Create urgency by reminding them that territories are exclusive and may no longer be available.

This sequence nurtures interest over time and is much more effective than relying on a single email invitation.

For Market Partners, we actually recommend using a sequence because they're making an investment decision. People rarely invest after reading just one email.

For example:

Email 1 – Introduction

Subject: An Exclusive Territory Opportunity Awaits You

Introduce Afri54 and briefly explain the Market Partner opportunity. The objective is to create curiosity.

Email 2 – Why Become a Market Partner?

Sent 2–3 days later.

Explain:

- What a Market Partner is.
 - Why territories have value.
 - The benefits of a 5-year exclusive territorial license.
 - The long-term recurring income opportunity.

Email 3 – Earning Potential

Sent 2–3 days later.

Show:

- Low adoption scenario.
- Medium adoption scenario.
- High adoption scenario.

Demonstrate how recurring commissions work and how renewals can generate ongoing income.

Email 4 – Frequently Asked Questions

Sent 2–3 days later.

Address common concerns such as:

- Why is there a subscription fee?
- What happens if someone else has already secured my territory?
- Can I own more than one territory?
- Do I need to recruit businesses myself?
- How do I earn recurring commissions?

This removes objections before they become barriers.

Email 5 – Limited Availability

Sent 3–5 days later.

Create urgency without sounding pushy.

For example:

Every territory is available on an exclusive basis. Once a territory has been secured by another Market Partner, it becomes unavailable. If you've been considering this opportunity, now is the perfect time to take the next step.

Include a clear call to action to apply or reserve a territory.

A proper sequence should gradually move the prospect from curiosity → understanding → confidence → trust → action. You don't ask for the sale in every email. Instead, you educate first and invite them to act when they're ready.

Now here is a sequence you can use

EMAIL 1 – Introduction

Subject:

Own a Territory. Benefit from Its Growth.

Warm regards,

One suggestion to make this sequence even stronger

Because you're targeting investors, We would add a P.S. at the end of each email. People often read the P.S. even if they skim the rest of the message.

For example:

P.S. Every territory is assigned on an exclusive basis. If your preferred territory is still available today, it may not be available tomorrow.
