History of the Rearview Mirror

Rearview mirrors were first introduced in racing (notably by Ray Harroun in the 1911 Indianapolis 500) and widely marketed for passenger cars around 1921, largely to monitor traffic and to avoid police detection. Initially called "cop-spotters," these early mirrors were marketed by inventors like Elmer Berger to help drivers track cars behind them, later becoming crucial safety features for visibility and navigating traffic. Although they appeared in the 1910s and 20s, they became a standard feature on most cars by the early 1930s, while passenger-side mirrors did not become standard on most cars until the late 1970s and 1980s.

Cadillac LaSalle Club Museum & Research Center in Hickory Corners, Michigan

The Cadillac LaSalle Club Museum is located on the Gilmore Car Museum campus in southwest Michigan. Designed as a replica of a vintage Cadillac dealership, it houses the pre-eminent collection of Cadillac vehicles and memorabilia from 1903 to 2011 and is open year-round. Operated by the Cadillac LaSalle Club Museum & Research Center (CLCMRC), the cars on display show why "Cadillac" became synonymous with excellence in its first 50 years.

The CLCMRC also operates a Research Center in southeast Michigan that houses thousands of documents from Cadillac's beginning to the present day, providing an invaluable resource to researchers, historians, car enthusiasts and the public. This information can be accessed by phone and the CLCMRC website.

The Museum and Research Center were built and are operated using donations from thousands of generous CLC members over the last 25 years.

You can learn more about the Museum & Research Center by scanning the QR code or visit www.cadillaclasallemuseum.org on your browser.
