From Flattop To Formal: Cadillac's 1959–1964 Four-Window And Six-Window Four-Door Hardtops

BY AARON SEVERSON – POSTED ON AUGUST 9, 2026

Read full article at curbsideclassic.com/design-3/from-flattop-to-formal-cadillacs-1959-1964-four-window-and-six-window-four-door-hardtops/

Between 1959 and 1964, Cadillac offered four-door hardtops in distinct “four-window” and “six-window” roof styles. While some customers may have appreciated this array of choices, buyers quickly demonstrated definite preferences for one roof over the other — which changed dramatically with the introduction of a new more formal roof style in 1962.

Cadillac offered its first two-door hardtop in 1949 and its first pillarless four-door Sedan de Ville in 1956. Starting in 1957, Cadillac went hardtop-only except in the formal Fleetwood Series 75 models. While the Coupe de Ville, convertible, and Eldorado were the glamour leaders, the four-door hardtop models represented the biggest chunk of Cadillac sales. Discounting the Seventy-Five and the Eldorado Brougham, in 1958, four-door Cadillacs looked like this. There were three trim levels — Series 62, De Ville, and Fleetwood Sixty Special — and variations in wheelbase and overall length, but the four-door roof styling was about the same on each.

This is what's known as a four-window (or four-light) body style, meaning there are two side windows (lights) on each side. Vent windows are not counted if they just subdivide a larger window space, nor are the wraparound portions of the windshield or back glass. For 1959, GM introduced a new four-door four-window hardtop roof, which was known internally as the “cantilever” or “flying wing.” (People today often refer to it a “flattop,” but GM Styling Staff didn't call it that, nor did the divisions that used it.)

Copilot Summary:

The 1959 Cadillac DeVille Sedan combined a powerful 390 cu in V8 with a smooth automatic transmission, offering a blend of comfort, luxury, and performance for its era. Its dimensions and weight reflected its role as a premium sedan, while the engine and drivetrain delivered respectable acceleration for the time. The 1959 Cadillac DeVille Sedan was a flagship American luxury sedan, part of Cadillac's DeVille series, known for its refined engineering and upscale interior.

Dolly Parton

If you had not heard, Dolly recently passed away. Dolly Parton's love for Cadillacs is as legendary as her music. From humble beginnings in the Smoky Mountains to global superstardom, she has always stayed true to her roots, expressing gratitude in grand, heartfelt gestures. One of the most touching was buying her mother a Cadillac, a tradition she kept for years. Among her cherished vehicles, the 1964 Cadillac Series 62 Sedan holds a special place, marking both her high school graduation and the start of her incredible journey. More than just cars, her Cadillacs tell a story of love, legacy, and the deep connections that shaped Dolly's remarkable life.

Cadillacs in the News

Tupac Shakur

In the BET television documentary series Death Row Chronicles, broadcast in 2018, Duane "Keefe D" Davis,[9][10][11][b] a South Side Compton Crips gang leader in California, stated that he, Terrence "T-Brown" Brown, Orlando Anderson, and DeAndrae "Dre" Smith were in the Cadillac involved in the drive-by shooting. Anderson, also a member of the Crips, was suspected in the murder for many years but denied being involved and was never charged; he was killed in an unrelated gang shooting in 1998. On September 29, 2023, Davis was arrested after being indicted by a grand jury for first-degree murder of Shakur;[12][13] he was found guilty of Shakur's murder on August 31, 2026. Source: Wikipedia

An electric Optiq visits the Ranch

There may be no more appropriate place in America to photograph a new Cadillac than a dusty field west of Amarillo, Texas, where 10 considerably older Cadillacs have been standing in the landscape for more than half a century.

Cadillac Racing

Questions: Contact our club expert Jon Nancy

Why Did Cadillac Decide To Focus On Racing?

Cadillac decided to focus on racing primarily to completely reinvent its global brand identity and shed its older reputation as a maker of soft, traditional land yachts. By pivoting to top-tier motorsports, Parent company General Motors (GM) explicitly repositioned Cadillac as a modern, high-performance luxury brand capable of competing head-to-head with elite European rivals like BMW, Mercedes-Benz, and Porsche.

The Core Motivations Behind Cadillac's Racing Focus

- Attracting a Younger, Global Audience: Traditional luxury markets are shifting. Cadillac heavily committed to sports car racing and its Formula One expansion because these series attract a massive, rapidly growing demographic of younger fans. F1 specifically establishes a premier brand impression in virtually every major global market Cadillac aims to expand into.
- Differentiating the GM Brand Portfolio: General Motors strategically assigns different racing disciplines to its brands. While Chevrolet handles domestic stock car racing in NASCAR, and the Corvette division focuses on sports car GT racing, Cadillac serves as GM's flagship for elite prototype and open-wheel racing (such as IMSA GTP, the 24 Hours of Le Mans, and Formula One).
- Validating the V-Series Performance Lineup: Racing serves as the ultimate marketing proof and testing ground for Cadillac's production performance vehicles. Successes on the track with machines like the V-Series. R prototype directly validate and fuel consumer interest in road-going performance models like the CT5-V Blackwing.
- Accelerated Engineering and Talent Training: Beyond marketing, Cadillac utilizes its racing teams as an intense corporate incubator. Engineers and technicians trained in the fast-paced, high-pressure racing environment learn to solve problems and make decisions incredibly fast. When rotated back to the consumer automotive side, they bring back a sharp, aggressive mindset that directly improves everyday crossovers, sedans, and propulsion systems.

Why Racing Is Important To Modern Cars

Racing acts as a fast-paced laboratory where engineers test new parts under extreme pressure. Ideas proven on the track quickly make everyday passenger cars safer, stronger, and more efficient.

Key Safety and Performance Upgrades

- Disc Brakes: Tested in endurance races to stop high-speed cars without failing from heat.
- Aerodynamics: Shaped by racing to cut through air, which saves fuel and increases electric vehicle range.
- Tire Grip: Improved by racing demands for better wet-weather control and durability.
- Tough Materials: Created to keep race cars light yet strong.

Modern Efficiency and Control

- Hybrid Energy: MotorTrend notes that track testing helps refine regenerative braking and power management.
- All-Wheel Drive: Popularized by rally racing to give normal cars better control in bad weather.
- Better Gearboxes: Dual-clutch and paddle-shift systems came straight from competitive racing.

August 16, 2026 Source CoPilot

The relationship between Jim Beam and Cadillac is rooted in a 90-year-old brand heritage story and an official global partnership for Cadillac's Formula 1 Team debut.

Historical Connection

- The Yeast Tradition: Brand history notes that founder Jim Beam placed a mason jar of his proprietary, secret yeast strain in the front seat of his Cadillac every evening to drive it home safely and protect it.
- Guarding the Legacy: This nightly routine safeguarded the essential living core of the family's bourbon recipe from damage or loss.
- Modern Tribute: Fred Noe, the seventh-generation master distiller for Jim Beam, continued the tradition by driving a Cadillac to honor that history.

The Formula 1 Partnership

- Official Collaboration: Jim Beam serves as the official spirits partner for the Cadillac Formula 1 Team.
- "Raised Together" Campaign: The brands launched a joint global marketing campaign celebrating their shared American roots, craft, and performance.
- Fan Experiences: The partnership features multi-year activations, fan events, and retail promotions across global racing tracks.

10 Memories of Working on Cars In the Driveway

1. Saturday mornings spent under the hood with the radio playing softly in the background
2. The smell of grease and oil that stayed on your hands long after you finished
3. Learning to change the oil and feeling proud when the engine ran smooth again
4. Those old paper repair manuals covered in fingerprints and grease stains
5. The quiet satisfaction of hearing the engine start after you fixed it yourself
6. Borrowing a tool from the neighbor and returning it with a simple thank you
7. Lying on a piece of cardboard under the car just to reach that one stubborn bolt
8. Showing your younger brother or son how to check the spark plugs for the first time
9. The quiet pride of keeping an old car running with nothing but your own two hands
10. Spending half the day covered in grease and not minding it one bit
