Board Meeting

The Board met in June and just wanted to share the plans and changes that we discussed. If you have questions or comments, let me know.

1. Starting in January, we will reinstate regular 3rd Saturday meetings at 1p.m. Because Findlay Cadillac is under construction, it was decided to rotate the locations. Requirements for location are parking 15-20 cars and cars are visible and reasonable food prices. We are open to suggestions. Current ideas are Atomic Motors, Lola's, Goldfinger's. Decisions will be made at our fall Board meeting.
2. Holiday Party is at Grapevine on Wednesday, December 16 - 6:00 p.m.

Metro was keeping an eye on us at Wicked Donuts!

The first electric car wasn't a single invention, but rather a progression of milestones:

- 1832: Scottish inventor Robert Anderson built the first crude, battery-powered "horseless carriage," though it used non-rechargeable batteries.1884: English inventor Thomas Parker built the first production electric car in Wolverhampton, UK.
- 1888: German engineer Andreas Flocken built the Flocken Elektrowagen, widely regarded as the first "real" four-wheeled electric car.
- 2008: The Tesla Roadster launched, becoming the first highway-legal production electric vehicle to use lithium-ion batteries.
- 2010: The Nissan Leaf debuted as the first mass-produced, pure-electric family car for the global market.

The first Cadillac vehicle to feature electric technology was the 1912 Cadillac Model 30 with an electric starter, while Cadillac's first modern fully electric vehicle is the Lyriq, introduced in 2022.

Early Electric Innovation: 1912 Cadillac
In 1912, Cadillac revolutionized automotive technology by introducing the electric starter on its Model 30, developed by Charles Kettering of DELCO (Dayton Engineering Laboratories Company. This system replaced the dangerous and physically demanding hand crank, making cars safer and more accessible, particularly for women and less physically strong drivers. The 1912 Cadillac used four six-volt batteries connected in series for a 24-volt starter, while lighting and accessories ran at six volts. Although not a fully electric vehicle, this innovation marked Cadillac's first significant use of electric technology in a production car.

Modern Electric Vehicles
Cadillac's first fully electric vehicle in the modern era is the Cadillac Lyriq, which debuted in 2022. The Lyriq is a luxury electric production SUV powered entirely by a battery-electric drivetrain, representing Cadillac's commitment to electrification in line with General Motors' broader EV strategy. Prior to the Lyriq, Cadillac experimented with plug-in hybrid concepts, such as the Converj concept car in 2009, which eventually influenced the Chevrolet Volt
These efforts laid the groundwork for Cadillac's transition from hybrid concepts to fully electric production vehicles.
This progression highlights Cadillac's long history of integrating electric technology, from early innovations in starting systems to modern battery-electric vehicles. Copilot Source/ AI Overview Search including sources: studebakermuseum.org; cadillaclasallemuseum.org; issueslab.com.

1. The all-time best-selling Cadillac model is the Cadillac De Ville. Spanning from 1959 to 2005, it moved roughly 3.9 million units over its lifespan, featuring legendary tailfins and unmatched luxury.
2. In the modern market, brand sales are dominated by the iconic Cadillac Escalade (including the ESV) and the Cadillac Lyriq. Cadillac Escalade: The undisputed modern sales leader. The Escalade family routinely drives the highest monthly and quarterly sales volumes, with single quarters often yielding over 13,000 deliveries. Cadillac Lyriq: The brand's leading all-electric vehicle has surged in popularity, regularly pulling in 7,000+ units a quarter and quickly becoming one of the most successful luxury EVs on the market. Cadillac XT5 & CT5: These two remain the strongest sellers among the brand's mid-size crossover and sedan lineups
3. Cadillac Series 62: ~1,300,000+ units sold (predecessor to the De Ville/fleet models)
4. All-Time Best Sellers
   - Cadillac De Ville: ~3,900,000 units sold
   - Cadillac Series 62: ~1,300,000+ units sold (predecessor to the De Ville/fleet models)

   - Cadillac CTS: ~800,000+ units sold across its production run [1, 2, 3]

Queen Elizabeth II's 1951 Cadillac Royal Parade Convertible Headlines

2026 Barrett-Jackson's Las Vegas Return September 10-12

Basic 1 day from $9.55

2026 Las Vegas Venue West Hall - 300 Convention Center Drive, Las Vegas, NV 89109 Las Vegas, NV

General Motors built the car specifically for the princess's 1951 Canadian Royal Tour, with General Motors Canada supplying it for the occasion. Finished in black over a red Hydes leather interior, the Cadillac pairs its original 331ci OHV V-8 and heavy-duty four-speed Hydramatic transmission with a custom clear bubbletop enclosure made by an aviation company, letting crowds see their princess while shielding her from the weather. It's one of only two 1951 Cadillacs built with a factory four-barrel carburetor, and it also carries power steering, power windows, power-adjustable front seats and an oversized radiator suited to slow-speed parade duty. The sale includes a factory commemorative dash plaque, the original build invoice, period photos of the princess with the car, and a rhinestone-and-silver replica of the George IV State Diadem tied to Queen Elizabeth II's reign.

1st parking meter

The world's first parking meter was installed on July 16, 1935, in downtown Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Known as "Park-O-Meter No. 1," it was invented by Carl C. Magee to solve severe traffic congestion by encouraging a rapid turnover of parked cars.

Key Facts: The Inventor: Carl C. Magee, a local newspaper publisher and traffic commissioner.

The Cost: Originally, drivers paid a nickel (5 cents) for one hour of parking.

The Problem It Solved: Downtown employees were parking their cars on the street all day, leaving no available spaces for shoppers and hurting retail businesses.

The First Location: The southeast corner of what was then First Street and Robinson Avenue.

How It Worked: To enforce the parking limits, the meter had a coin acceptor, a dial, and a visible flag. When a driver inserted a coin and turned the dial, a flag would pop up. When the paid time expired, the flag would drop, signaling to police that the car had overstayed its limit. Because of its success, the invention quickly spread to cities across the United States and worldwide. To learn more about the early days of municipal parking management, check out the Oklahoma Historical Society. "

How a Tire Company Got In On the Fine Dining Game With Michelin Star Ratings. Talk about a creative way to drum up interest in automobiles.

Popular Mechanics, By Matt CrisaraPublished: May 15, 2023 11:48 AM EDT

- The Michelin Star rating was the brainchild of André and Édouard Michelin—yes, the same French brothers who started the world-renowned tire brand. It all started with the Michelin Guide, which was minted in 1900, and had little to do with fine dining and everything to do with the automobile. The first car ever made—or at least the first to be patented—was Carl Benz' "three-wheeled Benz Patent Car, model no. 1" that arrived in the late 19th century. Therefore, the goal with the Michelin Guide was to simply drum up interest in automobiles—and the tires that would soon follow. For perspective, there were mere hundreds of cars on French roads at the time.
- The first Michelin Guide didn't include any kind of restaurant rating system at all. In fact, the first run of 35,000 copies featured maps (including lists of restaurants, hotels, and mechanics on popular routes) along with instructions on how to repair and replace tires—and it was distributed for free. While it did include information about restaurants, the first run was printed to showcase the amenities available on the open road and influence readers to buy automobiles. Michelin's second-edition guide was limited to only restaurants in France—which could only be awarded one star. It wasn't until 1931 that the system would expand from one to three stars. After it had been well-established in France, the guide would take another hiatus throughout the course of World War II, as it contained maps that would have been useful to the Allied forces.
- The actual Michelin Star rating didn't come about until the 1920s, after World War I had run its course. The Michelin brothers wanted to improve upon the first iteration, making all the content much more in-depth, while ditching the advertising; therefore, they began charging for the tarmac almanac. The first Michelin Star ratings were dished out in 1926. Surprisingly, the rating system didn't reach prominence in the United States until the early 2000s. Coming to America, it would solely focus on fine-dining establishments in New York but would eventually expand to restaurants nationwide. Starting from humble beginnings in France, the Michelin Star system now recognizes restaurants in 37 countries around the world in Europe, Asia, North America, and South America.
