

This is the second of four columns which, hopefully, gives insight on the formation of seminarians. This is in anticipation of the upcoming ordination of our parishioner, Charlie Cappelli.

Last week, I provided a sample of the intellectual formation that Charlie has received while in the seminary. I also mentioned how the spiritual formation is even more rigorous, as the seminarian is invited to wrestle with what God may be calling him to do.

Charlie did a “spirituality year” upon entering Saint Charles. It was an entire year focused on the spiritual life (with prayer, retreats, liturgy, and restrictions on smart phones, computers, and television). The year is designed to help seminarians transition into priestly formation by focusing on the interior life rather than academic study.

Additionally, Charlie has been guided by a spiritual director. Every seminarian meets regularly with his director. This director is not a therapist or academic mentor. Instead, he is a seasoned priest whose primary task is to help the seminarian identify how the Holy Spirit is working in his daily life (through his studies and throughout his personal history).

A spiritual director teaches the seminarian how to pray and meditate on God’s Word. The director provides the seminarian with a safe and confidential space to honestly discuss his interior life – its joys and struggles.

I cannot overestimate the importance of the role of a spiritual director in the life of a seminarian. He helps in vocational discernment through probing and radical soul-searching. But the spiritual formation Charlie has undergone wasn’t limited to this.

The daily schedule is intense. In addition to their classes, seminarians are in the chapel by 7 for Morning Prayer and 7:30 for Mass. They are in the chapel again for Evening Prayer at 5 and Night Prayer at 9. There are holy hours within the presence of the Blessed Sacrament, communal rosary, and regular spiritual conferences on topics such as celibacy, chastity, virtue, and stress.

Given all of this and especially the excellent formation he received in his family, Charlie has been built to be a good shepherd!

God bless you,

Father Matthew Guckin

OLMC School

Dear Friends:

I am filled with deep gratitude as I share the wonderful accomplishments of our OLMC School students, who continue to shine both academically and creatively. This spring, many of our learners participated in the Archdiocesan-wide literary competition, Reading Olympics, now in its third year. This inspiring event brought together nearly 1,800 students from 50 schools across five counties. Our students devoted their winter months to reading 25 selected books, preparing thoughtful summaries, and engaging in mock sessions led by their moderators Mrs. Rockovich, Ms. Daley, Mrs. Ivicic and Mrs. Kuhn. Their dedication culminated in a fantastic showing at the Bucks County competition on April 23, where our Elementary team, the OLMC Roaring Readers, earned a red ribbon, and our Middle School team, the OLMC Lit Squad, captured the top honor with a blue ribbon. Their teamwork and love of reading are truly commendable!

In addition to their literary success, our younger students showcased their artistic talents in the 35th annual Thompson Toyota Car of the Future Art Contest. Open to students in kindergarten through sixth grade, this competition challenges participants to imagine and illustrate innovative vehicles of the future inspired by Lexus, BMW, or Toyota designs. Under the guidance of our dedicated art teacher, Mrs. Barr, students explored their creativity through brainstorming and imaginative design. This year's contest included 1,450 entries from 54 schools, making our students' achievements even more impressive.

I am proud to share that our school received 12 of the 21 awards presented, a remarkable accomplishment that speaks to both the creativity of our students and the excellence of our art program. Each winner received a Target gift card and special recognition from Thompson Toyota. A very special congratulations goes to Anna, who earned the grand prize—her artwork will be displayed as a large banner in the dealership's front window for all to admire. What a beautiful testament to the gifts of our students and the inspiring guidance of Mrs. Barr. Thank you, as always, for your continued support of our school community.

God bless,
Dawn Parker
