

It's staggering how many Catholic Americans have made significant contributions to both our Faith and our freedom. As we approach our nation's 250th birthday, I ask you to consider a man who, though small in stature, had a giant impact on America.

Junipero Serra was born on the Spanish island of Majorca in 1713. He became a Franciscan priest and philosophy professor but always had a burning desire to be a missionary – to bring the Gospel to those who'd never heard of Christ.

Universally acclaimed as “brilliant,” Father Serra was granted his desire to travel to “New Spain” (now Mexico) at the age of 35. Upon arrival, he mostly traveled by foot from the east coast of the country to Mexico City – about 200 miles. From there, he began establishing Catholic missions, eventually making his way north into what would become the United States.

When he crossed into what is now America, Serra began establishing Catholic missions. These missions would include churches for praying, schools for learning, centers for community, and beautiful gardens for reflection. Additionally, his Franciscan friars taught the people how to irrigate fields for farming, thus ensuring a steadier supply of food.

Father Serra established missions along the West Coast that eventually grew into cities: San Diego, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, and San Francisco, to name a few.

To this day, Father Serra is despised by those who claim he was a pawn of Spanish colonialists. Statues built in his honor are routinely desecrated with red paint or smashed to pieces. Evidence, however, shows that he was not an agent of Spain. Frankly, the little Franciscan served as a human shield who often protected indigenous peoples from the Spanish soldiers who wanted to abuse them.

Serra died in 1784. Though California didn't gain statehood until 1850, his impact on America was epic. He established the foundation for what would become the world's sixth largest economy. He's actually honored in our U.S. Capitol Building with a bronze statue.

Pope Francis canonized Father Junipero Serra in 2015.

Saint Junipero Serra, pray for us!

Dear Friends:

Congratulations to our amazing Class of 2026! We are grateful to Fr. Guckin and Fr. Flanagan for officiating at the graduation Mass and sharing in this celebratory event, to the Knights of Columbus Honor Guard, and to the many members of our parish and local community who contributed awards and scholarships in support of our students. In addition to receiving diplomas recognizing the completion of their elementary academic career as prescribed the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, many students were acknowledged for their academic achievement, service, artistic talents and school spirit.
